[U.]S. CABINET, ASTONISHED AT [HI]S AUDACITY, WARNS HUERTA

[Prov]isional President Scorns Wilson's Note [as] 'Highly Intemperate' and Defiantly Proclaims Self Di[ctator]

State Historic and Natural History Society

[W]ASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—The United States government [warn]ed Mexican Provisional President Victoriano Huerta to[day th]at it looked with abhorrence and amazement upon his [assump]tion of both executive and legislative powers in Mexico [and th]at in view of his course, could not regard as constitu[tional the] election planned for October [26. The] notes were sent, the one phrased and written by Sec[retary] Bryan, inquiring about the [fate of] the imprisoned members of [the Mex]ican congress and the other [couched in] forceful language by President [Wil]son himself and said to con[stitute p]ractically the last efforts of [the Was]hington government to deal [with the] Huerta authorities by diplomatic [m]eans unless there is a decided [change of] spirit on the part of the of[ficials in] Mexico City.

[Ne]gotiations through John Lind [had pro]ceeded to the point where the [govern]ment accepted the indorse[ment of F]ederico Gamboa for the presi[dency, ...] the elimination of [Huerta, a]nd where it [was] confidently [hoped] a fair and free election [would be] held on October 26. Now, [Pre]sident Wilson has made [it plain t]hat the Washington govern[ment, ...] with the events of the last [few days,] the imprisonment of the [deputies] and the establishment of a [dictatorsh]ip by Huerta, lost all hope [that] a constitutional election held [could be] reali[zed].

[Step]s taken by the United States [were com]municated to all foreign gov[ernments.] No further negotiations are [likely th]rough diplomatic channels [and it co]uld not be [learned] if John [Lind] ... waiting at Vera [Cruz] ... the manner in which [Huerta] officials carried out their ... should return to the United [Stat]es.

[...] decrease [illegible] ... of the [illegible] ... and ... out at the [illegible] ... today's ... [illegible]

[illegible] ... Senor Querido Moheno, [m]inister of foreign affairs, had ... the American communi[cation] "intemperate."

Washington awaited tonight [the] reply being drafted by [the Hue]rta administration. Charge [d'Affaires O'Sh]aughnessy reported that he had [delivered b]oth communications and had [insis]ted with respect to the im[prisoned] deputies that no violence [be] done them, but that they [be] tried for sedition.

[The] second note of the Ameri[can gover]nment which is said to be [brief in] words in length, and prac[tically] ... off negotiations with [Huerta, w]hich is believed to have [provoked] Foreign Minister Moheno's [word], "intemperate."

[Hold Huer]ta Group Incompetent.

[Adminis]tration officials hold that [the arrest] of the members of the Mex[ican congr]ess in jail, a prominent mem[ber of con]gress who dared to speak adversely to the Huerta administration still mysteriously concealed and the congress dissolved it is impossible for the civilized world to believe the Huerta group capable of establishing or maintaining constitutional authority in the southern republic. They also feel that the Huerta officials no longer are deserving of such diplomatic relations as have hitherto existed.

As yet there is no concrete evidence that the Washington administration intends to use drastic measures. The White house has discouraged the heads of the army and navy from taking any steps that would give an alarmist impression.

Some officials said they would not be surprised if the failure of the Huerta government to comply with promises made to John Lind would cause the Washington administration to consider throwing its support to the constitutionalists in the north of Mexico. This might carry with it a lifting of the embargo on arms and many senators think the constitutionalists soon would triumph if they had such assistance. President Wilson and Secretary Bryan hitherto have opposed such a step, but informal communications within the last two weeks with the constitutionalists has indicated that the Washington administration is scrutinizing the [leaders] of the constitutionalist movement to determine what their purposes and whether they could establish constitutional authority in Mexico.

New Developments Seen.

Developments in the situation are expected to follow quickly now as the rejection in advance of the election planned for October 26 is likely to draw out a new [phase] of policy by the United States.

It is expected here that foreign governments generally will follow in the lead of the United States.

Former Senator Announces That He Will Devote His Attention to Companies in Which He is Associated

DENVER, Oct. 14.—The retirement of former Senator Simon Guggenheim of Colorado from politics and his election as chairman of the board of directors of the American Smelter and Refining company, the American Smelter and Securities company and the Guggenheim Exploration company was announced here tonight by dispatches from New York.

It is said Mr. Guggenheim will retain his Denver residence, but make his home in New York. He will devote his attention to the plants with which he is identified.

POLITICIANS WILL CONTROL CURRENCY

Glass Bill "Born in Caucus and Cradled in Politics," Declares Hepburn

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Declaring that the Owen-Glass currency bill now before congress was born in a caucus and cradled in politics since its inception, A. Barton Hepburn, chairman of the Chase National bank of New York attacked today the Wilson measure. Hepburn was one of the speakers at the national conference on currency reform, which opened here today under the auspices of the New York Academy of Political Science. At the conference leading figures in the administration's fight for the currency bill clashed with bankers opposed to the measure.

Senator Robert L. Owen, sponsor in the senate for the currency bill, Representative Carter Glass, who led the fight for the bill in the house, and Representative Robert J. Bulkley of Ohio, member of the house committee on banking and currency, defended the administration plan. Arthur Reynolds of Des Moines, Ia., president of the American Bankers association, and Mr. Hepburn spoke for the bankers opposed to the bill. Representative Glass was unable on account of illness to attend the conference and the speech he had prepared was read into the record.

The debate revolved largely about the wisdom of compelling national banks to join in the proposed system, under penalty of losing their charters and on the assertion that designation of the members of the federal reserve board by the president would open the way to political domination of the banking business.

Cradled in Politics.

"I am not especially fearful of political control," said Mr. Hepburn. "I am not even especially fearful of incompetent control, but when such as this bill was born in a caucus and cradled in politics from its inception, the public in general may be pardoned for having some misgivings as to whether politics may not have a part in its management."

Senator C[...] and Mr. Reynolds dis[...] [illegible] ... join in it. Mr. Reynolds said he had attended a recent conference of 800 country bankers in Boston and that they were united in their unwillingness to join the regional associations proposed.

Representative Glass held that the real reason for the opposition of bankers was the fear of loss of profits. Senator Owen was asked whether he had considered advocating the appointment of a federal board members for life, so that they would be above the suspicion of political control.

"In our country men live too long for that," the senator replied smilingly. He said the federal board members would be appointed for long terms, possibly 10 or 12 years, and that for these positions there should be selected men who were the equal intellectually of the men who sit on the supreme court bench.

Alexander Mann of Trinity church, Boston, in the election for presiding officer of the house of deputies at the forty-fourth triennial convention of the Episcopal church now in session at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York. It was privately rumored that Dr. Manning owed his defeat to the fact that he was foreign born. He is an Englishman by birth.

MRS. PANKHURST LIKELY TO BE HELD AT ELLIS ISLAND

If Landing is Disputed Suffragette Leader Will Go Before Special Board of Inquiry.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—Commissioner General Caminetti of the immigration bureau, in a [statement] tonight defining the attitude of the bureau toward Mrs. Pankhurst, the British suffragette, who is due to arrive in New York the latter part of this week, ... [illegible] ... will on her arrival at New York be held for examination by a board of special inquiry at Ellis Island, is without foundation."

But the history of the immigration bureau practically discloses that in cases of disputed landings the immigrant invariably is examined by a special board and that, of course, means detention at the Ellis Island station. Officials familiar with the administration of the immigration law expect that to be Mrs. Pankhurst's situation when she lands and for that reason Commissioner Caminetti has collected a record of the suffrage leader's activity for the assistance of the officers who will be called upon to decide whether she is ineligible to admission to the United States.

POLICE PICK UP BOYS WHO WANTED TO BE 'BAD MEN'

Runaway Lads From Victor, Aged 11 and 13 Respectively, Will Be Sent Back to Homes

Armed with a big six shooter and a 12-inch hunting knife with a razor edge, two boys 11 and 13 years of age were arrested yesterday by Detectives Rowan and Harper.

The youthful desperadoes had several rounds of ammunition, $30 in money, four black masks, three watches, a kodak and a copy of the "Wild West Weekly." When taken, they were about to purchase two more revolvers.

The lads told the police here that they ran away from their homes in Victor yesterday morning. One of the boys admitted having stolen $40 from his father's pocket while the latter was asleep.

Shortly after noon yesterday the boys went to a Huerfano street pawnshop and asked about the prices of revolvers. They expressed a desire of buying two weapons and the pawnbroker became suspicious. He notified the police and two detectives were soon on the way to the loan office.

The boys were taken to police headquarters where tearfully they told of their ambitions to be real ... [illegible] ... west. [illegible]

MANAGERS URGE NEW IMPEACHMENT CHARGE

Board Wants to Strengthen Case by Adding Peck-Morgenthau Testimony

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 14.—The possibility of indefinitely long delay in reaching a verdict as to the guilt or innocence of Governor William Sulzer loomed up at his trial today. This was suggested when counsel for the impeachment managers asked that the court recommend to the assembly the bringing of a new article of impeachment in the event that the testimony of Duncan W. Peck, superintendent of public works and Henry Morgenthau, ambassador to Turkey, should be found not to be relevant to any charge contained in the present articles.

No decision had been reached when adjournment was taken until tomorrow morning.

The executive session will be continued tomorrow morning.

The specific issue placed before the court in all-day arguments of counsel was whether the Peck-Morgenthau testimony constituted a new charge against the governor. Attorney John B. Stanchfield for the impeachment managers, brought it to a climax by proposing an amendment to article four specifying the names of Peck and Morgenthau in addition to those of Frederick A. Colwell, Louis A. Sarecky and Melville B. Fuller as persons whom the governor sought to prevent from testifying before the Frawley committee.

Perjury Is New Charge.

The proposed amendment differed from the original in that it specified that the governor attempted subornation of perjury, a felony, whereas the original merely charged that he "used threats and menaces," a misdemeanor.

Argument of counsel centered mainly around the point as to whether citing the governor for subornation of perjury constituted a new charge.

Attorney Stanchfield in presenting the amendment offered the counsel for the defense an opportunity to place the governor on the stand to refute the charge as amended, but they indicated no intention of doing so.

The substance of the eight articles voted against the governor by the assembly follows:

Article 1.—That he filed with the secretary of state a false statement of his receipts and other monetary transactions involved in his gubernatorial campaign.

Article 2.—That he committed perjury ... [illegible] ... secretary of state ... receipts and expenditures.

Article 3.—That he bribed witnesses to withhold testimony from the legislation committee which investigated his expenditures and receipts.

Article 4.—That he suppressed evidence by means of threats to keep witnesses from testifying before the legislation investigation committee.

Article 5.—That he prevented and dissuaded Frederick L. Colwell from attending under subpoenae the sessions of the investigating committee.

Article 6.—That he committed larceny in speculating in stocks with money and checks contributed for his campaign.

Article 7.—That as governor he threatened to affect the vote or political action of certain public officers.

Article 8.—That while governor he corruptly used his authority and influence to affect the current prices in the New York stock exchange in which some of the stocks he was interested.

ORIGIN OF DISASTROUS FIRE ON VOLTURNO STILL MYSTERY

Ill-Fated Vessel's Captain Tells Simple Story of Horrors of Tragedy, but Doesn't Say What Caused Fire

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Captain Francis Inch, whose steamer, the Volturno, was burned at sea with the loss of 136 lives, told his story of the disaster tonight. It is a plain seaman's tale, but in it line by line the horrors of the disaster and the terrible ordeal through which passengers and crew passed are brought out all the more clear perhaps because of the marked directness and simplicity with which the story is told. His narrative runs without apparent omission of any salient fact but one. Captain Inch does not say what caused the fire, reporting simply that the chief officer advised him at 10 minutes before 7 o'clock on the morning of October 9 of its existence below and that five minutes later the flames had burst through the forward hatches and were spreading rapidly.

Although all possible measures were taken at once to subdue the fire, the captain's story shows that it was even then too late to save the watch below. The men were trapped in the forecastle and burned to death there.

Then came explosions which wrecked part of the midships section of the steamer. The call for help by wireless had gone as soon as the flames shot through the forward hatches, and the crew did its best to stay the progress of the blaze until assistance could come.

It looked then as if there was no possible chance to save the steamer and although the seas were running high and the Volturno was rolling heavily, the captain had boats provisioned and swung out.

"Boats Nos. 13 and 5 were smashed," is the simple way Captain Inch describes the result of the first attempt to launch the life craft. Two boats under Chief Officer Miller and Fourth Officer Longsell finally got away. Captain Inch knew nothing of the fate of these boats and so far as is known no one else does. Although a widespread search has been made for them by steamers that were on the scene shortly afterward and by others notified by wireless no trace of them has been discovered and they probably are lost with all on board.

Captain Inch describes the arrival, one by one of the rescuing craft, summoned by the wireless operators who worked until 11 o'clock at night, when the fire had progressed so far that the magazines on the bridge containing signaling rockets and lights, blew up carrying away the aerial apparatus and compelling the wireless men to cease their efforts.

Transferred Survivors in Three Hours.

The Volturno's master covers in a few words the progress of the fire through the night and how when the rescue steamers came up and had failed because of the heavy weather to get boats to the burning liner, some passengers jumped overboard and were picked up by the attending craft. Wind, and sea having moderated the transfer of the remaining passengers to the steamers hovering about the blazing Volturno was begun at early dawn and accomplished in less than three hours without mishap.

Captain Inch sent his story of the disaster by wireless tonight from the Kroonland, on which he is being brought to this port, to the officers of the Uranium line here. Captain Inch's narrative reads:

"At 6:50 a. m. October 9, 1913, latitude 49.12, north, longitude 34.51, when the fire was reported in hole No. 1 by chief officer. At 6:55 a. m. flames were burning through No. 1 hatches, setting fire to the forecastle and all deck fittings. I slowed the ship down and kept her before the wind to enable us to put the steam extinguishers in operation, also three fire hose and deck connections. The flames were rapidly gaining, reaching the height of the foremast light and imprisoning the watch below, who were burned to death in the forecastle.

"A series of explosions now occurred, [wreck]ing the saloon and [...] amid[ships] ... [illegible] ... I gave orders to get boats out as soon as the flames burst the hatches.

First Two Boats Smashed.

"It seemingly being impossible to save the ship, I had boats provisioned and swung out. The ship was rolling heavily. Boats Nos. 13 and 5 were smashed, but No. 2 was lowered in the water with cabin passengers and stewardess in charge of Chief Officer H. P. Miller. After this boat left the ship she capsized, throwing her occupants into the water. She afterwards righted herself and several of the crew got back into the boat, the chief officer being one of them. The No. 7 boat was lowered and got away safely filled with steerage passengers in charge of Fourth Officer Longsell. The No. 7 boat on being lowered was caught under the stern of the ship, the boat being completely wrecked.

"Meanwhile the chief engineer, two seamen and myself fought the fire and apparently subdued the flames. I gave orders to send no more boats away as I had received word from the Carmania that she was hoping to be with us by 11 a. m. Lifebelts were served out and

[GREAT]ER OFFENSE BY STRIKERS AND STATE [MILIT]IA WILL ANNIHILATE LUDLOW COLONY

There they were [threatened] with death unless they re[...] and succeeded in get[ting their] husbands, who were em[ployed at th]e mine at Delagua to join [the strike. T]his office kept in constant [communica]tion with its agents at [Trinidad an]d Ludlow all through last [night and t]oday until the women were [returned sa]fely to their husbands. The [most ser]ious trouble broke out

In spite of Vice President Hayes' flat denial of any conversation with Adjt. Gen. John Chase last night relative to the release of the women, or the alternative of having the entire state militia sent to Ludlow at once, Governor Ammons tonight stated:

"Indeed such word was conveyed to Mr. Hayes and that's not all of it. I was in constant touch with the situation throughout and I told the union officials beyond any misconstruction of my words or ideas just what would happen if those women were not released."

At Segundo today, according to reports to the governor, a riot in which many harmless shots were fired was precipitated between strikers and mine guards by an assault upon a mine camp marshal.

B. E. Corey, the guard, was dragged from his horse and severely beaten it was said by a force of armed strikers. The horse riderless returned to the camp and rescuing parties of guards made a sortie and were fired upon from ambush. Corey was released.

Trouble is said to have broken out at Sopris today when Jesse Shaw, president of the Sopris union, was reported to have threatened violence to the saloon keeper for his selling liquor to nonunion men. It is said that Shaw with 100 strikers went to the saloon and made a demonstration with guns and threatened to [blow] up the place.

MANY HEROIC RESCUES IN NEW ENGLAND GALE

Sudden Storm Sweeps Down on Coastwise Shipping, Leaving Ruin in Wake

BOSTON, Oct. 14.—A northeast gale swept down upon the coast and shipping on the New England coast today leaving ruin in its wake. Heroic rescues kept the known loss of life down to one, that of Captain Sears Perry of Sandwich, who perished in the wreck of his seine boat on Scorton beach.

The barge Sumner R. Mead, one of the tow of the tug Paoli, from New York for Boston, piled up on the tip of Cape Cod and her crew of three men were taken off by the Paoli. The Oakland, another of the Paoli's string was in a precarious position near Highland light tonight with her crew signalling for help. Six men were rescued from the two-masted British schooner Georgie Pearl, Elizabethport for Liverpool, N. S., by the life savers on Nantucket. The vessel was expected to go to pieces before morning.

Off the extreme northeast of the New England coast another daring rescue of [...] men took place when a small boat from a Canadian steamer braved the breakers near Grand Manan, N. B., where the British fishing schooner [...] was pounding to pieces.

As usual the brunt of the gale was felt on Cape Cod. A large coastwise fleet of schooners, tugs and barges released yesterday from a two weeks' fog embargo was caught rounding the cape. Many of them worked to snug anchorage with the loss of sails and deck fittings. The schooner Henrietta A. Whitney was brought into Vineyard Haven by a tug after a narrow escape on Tuckernuck shoals. She sighted the revenue cutter Gresham struggling to save a tow master from the Cross Rip shoals.

EPISCOPALIANS URGE GOVERNMENT CHANGE

Would Group Dioceses Into Synods; Means American Pope, Say Many

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—One of the governing bodies—the house of deputies—of the Protestant Episcopal church of America voted today at the triennial general convention of the church to group the dioceses into provinces or synods eight in number after the customs that prevail in the Episcopal church in England. To become effective this proposed legislation must receive the concurrence of the house of bishops.

The house of bishops in executive session today declined to adopt two recommendations presented by a commission appointed two years ago to consider relations of the army and navy chaplains to the church. One recommendation suggested placing the army and navy in a separate diocese under a bishop and the other that the army and navy chaplains should be under the jurisdiction of a committee of three bishops including the bishop of Washington as chairman.

Many of the low church delegates opposed the forming of synods on the ground that it was a step in the direction of archbishops and an American pope.

NEARLY 400 WELSH COAL MINERS PERISH WHEN EXPLOSION AND FIRE WRECK MINE

More Than 500 Rescued but no Hope is Held Out for Those Trapped in Workings

CARDIFF, Wales, Oct. 15.—A disaster possibly the greatest in the history of the South Wales coal fields whose annals are bristling with terrible catastrophes occurred yesterday through an explosion in the Universal colliery near here. Shortly after the day shift of 931 men entered the mine an explosion shattered the works. To[...] about 500 miners were brought to the surface alive. After midnight the rescuing parties began to get the fires under control and at 3:30 o'clock this morning 20 more men were found alive at the bottom of the pit. This gave hope that others might be found but there is still a probability that nearly 400 men perished.

In ... the bodies recovered and those killed at the pit head the known death ... numbers ... Doctors with oxygen and medicants descended the mine this morning. A great crowd of distracted persons surrounded the pit head all night and nearly 5000 waited for news at the Cardiff station.

The rescued miners, the members of the life saving gangs and the officials of the mine declared yesterday afternoon that they could hold out no hope for those of the miners still below.

The men brought to the surface were found on the east side of the mine where the ventilation remained fairly good. On the west side where the explosion occurred fire soon added its terrors and the rescue parties were unable to make any progress. The officials of the mine found it necessary to call a detachment of the police to keep back the women and children who crowded around the entrances in hopes of obtaining some news of their relatives.

Most of the rescued men presented a pitiable appearance. Several were suffering from burns, shock or the effects of poisonous gases.

GIRL SUPPOSED TO HAVE KILLED SELF, MURDERED

THOMASVILLE, Ga., Oct. 14.—What at first appeared to be a suicide in a local boarding house of Miss Dorothy Haug of Knoxville, Tenn., was definitely established today to have been a murder and the local authorities have begun a search for the slayer for whose identity they have no clue.

The girl's skull had been crushed with a blunt instrument and although a revolver with one chamber empty lay beside her body when it was found Monday morning, physicians declared she had suffered no bullet wound and no bullet had been found anywhere in the room she occupied.

CIGARETTE STUB CAUSE OF FIRE

SEAMAN SAYS SMOKING RULE WAS VIOLATED

Steerage Passenger Probably Threw Stub in Hold When He Saw Inspector

HAVRE, Oct. 14.—Captain Caussin of the La Touraine, in a detailed report to the French Transatlantic company, told of the rescue work of his men.

Lieutenant Isenic reported that upon his arrival at the side of the Volturno, that vessel was blazing from her bows to amidships and plunging and rolling. Crew and passengers had been driven to the extreme after part of the vessel, where they uttered incessant cries of terror. The whaleboat stood off, its crew calling to the passengers to jump into the sea, when they would be taken on board. None, however, would jump until the Touraine's whaleboat was thrown by a gigantic wave against the Volturno's side. Instantly a number jumped or slid down ropes into the boat. Two who had jumped for the boat disappeared under the side of the Volturno as she rolled. One man landed on a sailor in the whaleboat and injured him.

"Happily, Lieutenant Isenic was able to get clear of the Volturno with five passengers, or his boat would have been overloaded and sunk.

"The other whaleboat, commanded by Second Captain Rousselet of the Touraine, was near the stern of the Volturno and its crew were calling to the passengers to jump, but none would do so. No other boat was seen at that time near the burning ship.

Wanted to Make Second Trip.

"Lieutenant Isenic wanted to put off again from the Touraine, but I sent the second mate with a fresh crew. Rousselet returned later with three rescued people. All who were brought in were in a state of great exhaustion.

Rousselet was allowed to make another trip in his whaleboat with a fresh crew; and I then lowered a lifeboat, thinking it might bring back a larger load.

"The second mate returned with seven passengers he had picked up, and Rousselet brought back seven others.

"Rousselet reported that he had found ropes, pulley tackle and a pair of ladders along the after part of the Volturno, dangling from the sides. The vessel had a strong list to starboard, her nose was low in the waves and the water was breaking over her. The flames lighted up the scene as Rousselet's whaleboat ran in close and a hail of human beings fell upon it and its crew. Fourteen people were picked up, of which seven were transferred to the other whaleboat.

"By this time it was 6 o'clock on Friday morning, and numerous boats from the other ships alongside had been lowered and were around the Volturno. Another of our boats took two women and two children from the sea, which had become calmer.

"The women and children were let down into the water with ropes.

"When no people were on board the Volturno our boats were taken in.

Panic Caused Loss of Life.

"If there had been less panic at the beginning of the fire, many more could have been saved. Unfortunately, two boats launched from the Volturno were broken up by the seas and it is certain that many were drowned during the night. If the crew and passengers had kept calm, everybody might have been saved.

"The doctor, the purser and several officers of the Volturno were among the last to get into the boats and Captain Inch was the very last to leave his ship."

Friederich Radtke, a young steerage passenger, was the first person on board the Volturno to discover the fire.

"I saw smoke coming through the cracks in the floor of my quarters forward," he said, "and I became sure that the hold below was afire. I ran as fast as I could to the deck in front of the bridge. The captain himself was here and I called him in German and told him his ship was on fire. He did not understand me. I called out again in Polish and then shouted in Yiddish, but still I was unable to make him understand, and he sent down a sailor to inquire what was the matter.

"I led the sailor down to the steerage deck. When he saw the smoke he opened one of the hatches and was met with a rush of smoke and heat. The sailor then returned to the bridge and warned the captain."

Some, Frightened, Jumped.

All the passengers in the forward steerage had by this time become aroused, and everyone seemed panic stricken. I believe some jumped overboard from sheer fright. When the flames became visible there was an excited rush aft, and the passages and stairways for a while were crowded with struggling, fighting people.

"In the meantime the fire crew manned the fire apparatus under the eye of Captain Inch. In the absence of the captain and other officers who were below fighting the fire, there was most disorder on deck when the panic-stricken passengers gathered around the lifeboats.

"Everyone rushed to the boats to try to launch them despite the high sea. There was a great clamor as to who should get into the boats first. The first-class passengers insisted upon their right, and a number climbed in with some of the crew. I don't know exactly what happened, but one boat before it touched the water turned over and dumped everyone into the sea.

"The second boat seemed somehow to be broken in pieces when it touched the water. Two others got away. There was crowding towards the other boats. Then the cook, named Kaser, and a young Englishman armed with iron belaying pins took control of the situation. They struck a few of the more panic-stricken and shouted that it was impossible for a boat to keep afloat.

Stories Differ Radically.

LONDON, Oct. 14.—Stewart J. Fuller, United States consul at Durban, who was a passenger on board the Minneapolis, was able to talk in their own language with some of those rescued from the Volturno by the crew of the Minneapolis.

Mr. Fuller told the Associated Press he had gathered from the survivors that there was no panic on board the burning ship, and that on the whole good order had been maintained though the passengers had been herded aft like a flock of sheep. They complained that the ship's officers had treated them roughly and had refused to give them any information.

One survivor told Consul Fuller that the first boat lowered from the Volturno, which was dashed to pieces against the steamer's side and all its occupants drowned, was loaded mainly with women and children, which indicated that the men had acquiesced in giving them precedence. The fact that all [illegible] rescued by the Minneapolis were men afforded further evidence that this was true. They were nearly the last boatload taken off. Many had seen their wives and children depart in the early boats.

ORIGIN OF DISASTROUS FIRE

"At 8 a. m. the bunker was found to be ablaze. It being impossible to stop the fire in the bunker on account of [illegible], the watertight doors were closed and water pumped down the No. 2 hatch onto the fire, but the fire was gaining all the time.

"At 11 a. m. the Carmania arrived and lowered a boat, but could not reach the ship on account of high seas. Asked Carmania to look out for the No. 2 boat. The steamship Seydlitz arrived and lowered boats which could not reach us. About 3 p. m. the Carmania returned and tried to reach the ship with life rafts, but all drifted past our boat, too far away.

All Attempts at Rescue Fail.

"Several steamers had arrived by dusk. The Kroonland put away boats which made four attempts to come alongside, but were swept away each time.

"At 9:30 p. m. the saloon and charthouse were flaming. The deck, bridge and all before the funnel were blazing fiercely. Pumps and dynamos stopped for want of steam. Marconi operators worked with the accumulator until 11 p. m., when the magazine on the bridge blew up, carrying the aerial away.

"Several boats by this time were laying off the ship and induced passengers to jump, and they were rescued by boats. At 12, midnight, the weather was overcast and squally. Operations were suspended, it being too dark for those in boats to see. The fire, meanwhile, worked through the women's steerage to the after end of the ship, but we kept knowledge of this from the passengers, who were quiet throughout the rest of the night.

"The chief engineer, the Marconi men and seamen and myself spent the night making small rafts, in case the fire burned through the deck before daylight.

"At 5:15 a. m. the first boat arrived. Weather and sea having moderated, the boats were able to come alongside the ship, which enabled passengers to embark quickly. All the steamers around the ship sent boats. Now we were enabled to load three boats with passengers at once. The passengers left in a very orderly way and there was no panic, women breaking down and crying when help was alongside, and all were off the ship by 9 a. m., about 400 passengers. I searched the ship myself and found no one else on board, so decided to abandon her, as the No. 3 hatch was well alight by now, so with the remainder of the crew, I embarked on the Kroonland.

Boats Still Missing.

"Nothing at all has been heard of the two missing boats. Passing vessels were asked to keep a lookout for them.

"I wish to express my heartfelt thanks and gratitude to the captains of ships who stood by; also to the officers and crews who came to our assistance, for the bravery and endurance in their endeavor to come alongside the ship; also to the passengers of the Kroonland, for their kindness to the rescued passengers, engineers and crew and myself, in fitting us out and doing everything for us. Following are the names of the steamers that came to our assistance:

"Carmania, Grosser Kurfurst, La Touraine, Asian, Narragansett, Czar, Seydlitz, Minneapolis, Devonian, Czar, Rappahannock; also one other steamer without wireless. The ship was abandoned in latitude 49.20 north, longitude 34.77 west."

Captain Inch's story came by wireless tonight from the Kroonland, which is bringing [illegible] and [illegible] to this port. The Kroonland [illegible] not reach here until Thursday, because of an engine accident [illegible].

[illegible] Agent [illegible] of the [illegible] line [illegible] today his figures showed 657 persons on the Volturno, 24 cabin and 540 steerage passengers and 93 in the crew. His lists accounted for 526, leaving 131 missing.

It was announced tonight that the North German Lloyd steamer Seydlitz, having 46 survivors of the Volturno [illegible] at [illegible] today before proceeding to Baltimore.

The steamer Grosser Kurfurst, with 105 survivors on board, is due here tomorrow morning. The rescued passengers she carries will be allowed to land without the usual examination at Ellis island. The Red Cross committee will take charge of them.

Saw Flames 20 Miles Away.

HALIFAX, N. S., Oct. 14.—Captain Harneden of the Furness line, Rappahannock, which arrived here tonight, told of his part in the rescue of 15 women and four children, the first to be taken from the flame swept steamer Volturno.

After hearing the Carmania's report of the Volturno's position he gave orders to crowd on all steam. Captain Harneden said:

"At 10:30 a. m. Thursday when the Carmania's message was received, we were about 180 miles from the Volturno, and various wireless messages exchanged led us to believe her position was very desperate.

"At 9:30 p. m. we sighted the burning ship about 20 miles away and when we came nearer the flames were rising above her funnel.

"At 12:25 that night we sent our first lifeboat to the wreck. About 2:30 a. m. the boat returned and reported it was dangerous to approach within 50 feet of the Volturno. There were about 400 passengers on board then, but they appeared too frightened to jump into the sea and trust to being picked up by the boats. All had lifebelts on. It was decided to wait until daylight.

"At 6 a. m. Friday I sent the boat away again and she succeeded in saving 15 women and four children, all of whom were in a most pitiful state. The boat again returned to the rescue, but boats from the various other steamers had succeeded in getting all the people off.

"After all had ben rescued, search was made for two boats reported to have left the Volturno before any of the other passengers came to her assistance and which were reported missing. Eleven steamers scattered and searched, but no bodies or people were found."

Required Delicate Maneuvering.

The captain explained that with the heavy wind and rough seas some delicate maneuvering was required in a fleet of 11 ships. They circled about the burning craft and when one of the fleet got in a good position to windward she would send off a lifeboat and then work around the circle to the leeward of the Volturno and watch for an opportunity to take the lifeboat on board, again going to windward and launching another boat.

The arrival of the oil tank Narragansett and the pouring of her cargo of oils on the water very materially aided in the work of rescue. It was stated, however, that more than half of the people were rescued before the arrival of the tank steamer.

Twelve of the 19 Volturno survivors bound for the United States sailed at midnight for New York on the Red Star liner Florizel. Five will leave for Cape Breton tomorrow.

LONDON, Oct. 14.—The arrival today of the Devonian at Liverpool and the Minneapolis at Gravesend added little to what was already known of the Volturno disaster.

The survivors presented a pitiable picture. Though plied with questions through interpreters they seemed powerless to give a connected story of the beginnings.

It appears that many lost their lives through jumping into the sea in a frenzy. A boy sprang overboard in spite of the efforts of his mother to prevent him.

Some of the survivors repeat the story that the Volturno's officers had to threaten with revolvers to keep order among the crew.

PRISON AND PUBLIC SCHOOLS SIMILIAR

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 14.—"There is not much difference between the prison school and the public schools of the country," declared Bert E. Merriam, educational director of the New Jersey reformatory at Rahway, who addressed the American prison association today. Professor Merriam said they had all classes at the New Jersey institution, but that they fitted the work to the classes instead of making the classes fit the work, as is done in many of the public schools. A. C. Hill of the New York state department of education told of the educational system in vogue in New York penal institutions. There the head teachers are civilians and the under teachers are convicts. A plea for the convict teachers was made by several officers of the Salvation army during the discussion. They told of personal experiences in their prison work where convict teachers, especially in the south were successful.

IF BACKACHY OR KIDNEYS BOTHER

EAT LESS MEAT AND TAKE GLASS OF SALTS BEFORE EATING BREAKFAST.

Uric acid in meat excites the kidneys; they become overworked; get sluggish, ache, and feel like lumps of lead. The urine becomes cloudy; the bladder is irritated, and you may be obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night. When the kidneys clog you must help them flush off the body's urinous waste or you'll be a real sick person shortly. At first you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, you suffer from backache, sick headache, dizziness, stomach gets sour, tongue coated and you feel rheumatic twinges when the weather is bad.

Eat less meat, drink lots of water; also get from any pharmacist four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active. Druggists here say they sell lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble. Adv.

POLICE CALLED OUT ON REPORTS OF SHOOTING

The police received word late last night that there had been a shooting affray at 1525 Washington avenue, and in answer, several officers were rushed to the address. According to the officers, Nelson H. Clark, who lives at the address, was intoxicated and had made several flourishes with a revolver. Neighbors of the Clark home, claimed they heard one shot, but Mrs. Clark denied that her husband had fired at her.

According to the police, Clark stood for several minutes with the revolver pointed at his own head. Clark was not arrested when he promised to cause no more trouble.

tion as ambassador to Mexico went into effect.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 14.—The status quo will not be changed by the latest exchanges of notes between Mexico and the United States, according to information given out at the Mexican foreign office late tonight.

The diplomatic communications between Washington and Mexico, growing out of the dissolution of the Mexican congress and the imprisonment of the deputies, have been the subject of intense interest today. Neither the American charge d'affaires nor the Mexican foreign office has made known the tenor of the exchange.

Nelson O'Shaughnessy, the charge, appearing deeply concerned, made visits to the foreign office and the president's office, and for several hours this afternoon, after the meeting of the cabinet, the foreign minister, Senor Mohono, locked himself in his offices and refused to receive callers. His secretary said that he was busy preparing the reply which Mexico was to make to the Washington memorandum. Later, Senor Mohono said to the newspaper men that he had finished his task, but that before making public the character of the reply it must be submitted for further scrutiny to the ministers, who were summoned to gather at the president's office tonight.

Ask U. S. Diplomats to Leave.

The most startling rumor which became current was that the American charge was to be given his passports and that the Mexican government regarded the attitude of the United States as such that it no longer could continue to receive a Washington representative. It also was said that President Wilson's personal representative, John Lind, now at Vera Cruz, would be asked to leave Mexico.

Senor Mohono verbally denied that there was any truth in these rumors.

"My government has no such intentions," he said. "We have no information to what the government of the United States intends, but so far as my government is concerned, Mr. O'Shaughnessy may remain, and will receive every consideration."

While the attaches of the embassy are dumb respecting the contents of the Washington memorandum, it is learned from other sources that the American government has notified President Huerta that owing to the high-handed manner in which the Mexican congress was suppressed, no free elections were possible, and that no president elected under the conditions existing would be acceptable to Washington.

Regarding the possible withdrawal of recognition by Great Britain and the dispatch to Mexico of warships by Germany, the foreign minister said tonight that he had no official information. He regarded it as extremely improbable that Great Britain would change her policy, citing the recent dispatch of a new ambassador, Sir Lionel Carden, to the Mexican capital, which step he considered would not have been taken had the British foreign office such intentions. The warships, if they came, he thought, would make merely visits of courtesy.

Notes Not Made Public.

In a statement issued by Senor Moheno after the cabinet meeting the minister of foreign relations said:

"The capital press wrongly interpreting certain declarations of which it has treated, has given undue importance the matter of notes submitted by the American government to Mexico. The government has received from the American department of State, through the charge d'affaires, two messages which will be answered by the government and which will not modify in the slightest degree the status quo of our relations with the neighboring republic. The country will know the contents of the messages and the replies thereto in due time."

Earlier in the day he announced that he would make known the contents of the American notes and the reply tonight. It is not stated what altered the decision of the Mexican officials, but it is understood failure to make the notes public was due to the effort of the American in charge.

Huerta's Decree.

In his decree Huerta declared suspended that provision of the constitution which grants immunity from arrest to members of the Mexican congress and announces that he will from time to time issue executive decrees because of the dissolution of congress. Huerta's decree, dated October 11, says in part:

"In view of the fact that the chamber of deputies and senators of the congress of the union have been dissolved and inhibited to perform their functions and in view of the powers which I hold in the department of gobernacion, according to the decree of October 11, this year, I have seen fit to decree that article 1, the constitutional exemption from arrest and judicial action which the citizens who form the twenty-sixth congress of the union enjoyed in view of their functions, is hereby repealed, and consequently they are subject to the jurisdiction of the tribunals corresponding to the case in the event that they are guilty of any crime or offense."

In a decree under the date of October 10, Huerta declares that "until the people elect new magistrates who shall take over the legislative powers, and to the belief that the government should count on all the necessary facilities to face the situation and to reestablish the constutional order of things in the shortest possible time as is its purpose, since October 26 has been set as a date for election of deputies and senators, Victoriano Huerta, constitutional president ad interim, has seen fit to decree these articles of decree:

"Article 1.—The judicial power of the federation shall continue in its functions within the limits set by the constitution of the republic and the decree of the executive of October 10 of this month and such others as shall be issued by him.

"Article 2.—The executive power of the union conserves the powers conferred on him by the constitution and assumes, furthermore the departments of gobernacion, finance and war only for the time absolutely necessary for the reestablishment of legislative power.

"In the meantime the executive takes on himself the powers granted by the constitution in the aforementioned departments and will make use of them by issuing decrees which shall be observed generally and which he may deem expedient for the public welfare.

"Article 3.—The executive of the union will render an accounting to the legislative power of the use which he makes of the powers which he assumed by means of this decree as soon as this is in function."

The Mexican situation took up so much time at the cabinet meeting that the naval program was not reached for discussion and it was agreed that President Wilson would take the subject up with each member individually. None of the secretaries would comment on Huerta's decree assuming the powers of government further than to characterize it as "very interesting."

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14. Constitutionalist juntas all along the border were reporting to their headquarters here today that their general, Pancho Villa, had left Torreon with 8,000 men and considerable artillery to move on Saltillo or Monterey, and that a large force under Blanco had left Matamoras, moving westward to join him.

This Leaves the Skin Smooth and Hairless

(Boudoir Secrets.)

The electric needle for removing hairy or fuzzy growths is fast falling into disfavor among beauty specialists, because quicker and better results are obtained with the aid of a paste made by stirring together a little powdered delatone and water. This is applied on the hairs that are wanted and in 2 minutes rubbed off, and with it comes every trace of hair. The skin should then be washed to remove the remaining paste and it will be left smooth and spotless. Buy delatone in original packages only. Adv.

General Maas and Staff Granted Permission to Travel Over Texas Soil

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Oct. 14.—Orders were telegraphed today from department headquarters here to Lieutenant Colonel Guy Carlton, commanding United States troops at Eagle Pass, to admit General Joaquin Maas and staff of 10 men with permission to pass over Texas soil to Laredo.

Similar requests by constitutionalist leaders for permission to travel over American territory or to visit their families on the American side repeatedly have been refused.

EAGLE PASS, Tex., Oct. 14. General Joaquin Maas, federal commander at Piedras Negras, Mexico, and his staff of 10 officers, were ready this afternoon at the international boundary to begin their trip to Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, through American territory when the general was notified by railroad officials that it would be impossible to arrange his special train before tomorrow morning. Lack of equipment here was given as the reason. It is stated the delay will not change the original plans. General Maas' purpose in going to Nuevo Laredo is to attend a conference of military leaders.

Permission to cross the boundary came from Washington after being denied by local military authorities.

AUSTIN, Tex., Oct. 14. Acting Governor William H. Mayes of Texas ruled today that the state of Texas was without authority to interfere with the passing of General Joaquin Maas, Mexican federal commander at Piedras Negras, and his staff through Texas to attend a conference at Nuevo Laredo, Mexico. A reply to this effect was sent late today to Carlos Bee of San Antonio who sent a telegram to the acting governor protesting against the Mexican commander and his escort crossing Texas territory.

Governor Colquitt of Texas at present is enroute by New Orleans from Panama.

GUARDS CAPTURE ESCAPED CONVICT AFTER STRUGGLE

CANON CITY, Oct. 14. After a hand-to-hand fight in which six prison guards took part, George Haigh, a convict at the penitentiary who escaped yesterday, was captured tonight at Portland. When set upon by the guards, the convict threw himself upon them and began beating them with his fists. They overpowered and manacled him to a guard. A few minutes later the convict by a desperate twist, broke loose, but was again overpowered. Haigh was convicted of burglary in Denver and began his sentence of from three to six years last March. He was employed as cook in the deputy warden's home at the time of his escape.

U. S. COMMERCIAL BODY APPROVES CURRENCY BILL

COMMITTEE REPORT IS ADOPTED, 303 TO 17

Recommend Few Amendments Which Will Materially Strengthen Plan

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 14.—The constituent members of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States of metropolitan, including local chambers of commerce, boards of trade, commercial clubs and national trades organizations in all parts of the country, have approved by referendum vote the report of its banking and currency committee on the Owen-Glass currency bill now pending in congress. The board of directors of the chamber in session here completed the canvass of the ballots today and found the sentiment of the business men's organizations strongly in favor of the report of the committee, the vote cast being 303 for and 17 against.

The committee, in its report, which was made the basis of the referendum, stated:

"It regards the measure as a piece of constructive legislation and believes it embodies to a large degree the elements to provide the nation with a safe currency and banking system. In view of the fact that the framers of the measure invite friendly criticism and suggestions, we are prompted to point out wherein the proposed act may be materially improved and strengthened."

In accordance with this statement seven recommendations were submitted for separate vote. All these have been approved by large majorities.

The separate recommendations were as follows:

First—In favor of the increase of the federal reserve board to nine members, the two additional members to be chosen by the original seven members, subject to the approval of the president; the compensation of the governor and vice governor to be fixed by the board itself.

Second—The creation of the federal reserve council to be elected by the regional reserve banks, the president and vice president of the council to reside in Washington and to sit at meetings of the federal reserve board, but without vote; their salaries to be fixed by the banks.

Third—That in the creation of the new system of regional reserve banks a beginning be made with the present central reserve cities (three in number) the number to be increased gradually by the federal reserve boards as in their judgment conditions warrant.

Fourth—Concerning note issues: That restriction of the issues of federal reserve notes to $500,000,000 be eliminated, so that interest on federal reserve notes be eliminated, that it be made unlawful for any federal reserve bank to pay out any notes but its own; the notes issuing being given an identifying number.

Fifth—That federal reserve notes should not be obligations of the government, but should be guaranteed by the United States, and that they shall be redeemable by federal reserve banks and not at the treasury of the United States.

Sixth—That federal reserve banks mutually guarantee the federal reserve notes by providing that said notes shall become a first and permanent lien on the combined assets of federal reserve banks.

Seventh—That the reserve requirements of the Owen-Glass bill be modified and reduced for both country banks and banks in reserve cities.

The board of directors has requested an opportunity to be heard before the senate committee for the purpose of presenting the opinions recorded.

"THE WHITE SLAVE"

The unusual prosperity which has attended the revival of Bartley Campbell's popular play, "The White Slave," this season has been one of the surprises of recent theatrical history, especially to the younger generation, who have come to believe that the life of a successful play is limited from two to five years. And when we go into a brief history of this remarkable play, we find that it was written in 1881 and produced in the spring of 1882. The men and women who made up the original cast of "The White Slave" were at that time on the very top rung of the histrionic ladder; for instance: [illegible] it in a new and novel fashion; he has intermingled the love sentiment with a spirit of adventure found in the cities where men use their brains instead of their guns to bring down the game. Briefly, the story tells how a young society chap has invested his all in a western gold mine in the hope of winning quick riches, so that he can marry the girl of his choice, and of his attempt to promote the sale of the stock so that the mine may be successfully operated. The novel way in which his friends are made to actively fall over each other in their scramble to get in on the stock, introduces an element of risk and daring that bring United States secret service very prominently into the play.

HUERTA THE DICTATOR

GENERAL HUERTA has come out into the open a little sooner and more emphatically than even his most suspicious American critics expected. When he announced that he would not be a candidate in the forthcoming presidential election the public wondered just what card he had up his sleeve, ready to play at the critical moment. One guess was that he had already accumulated a fortune in his brief tenure of power and expected to follow Latin-American custom by going to Paris to spend the remainder of his days in luxurious enjoyment of it. Another supposition was that he would attempt to retain power by executing a coup of some kind which would nullify the election and still leave him in office.

Yesterday's dispatches show that this belief was well founded. Huerta has followed up his recent high-handed action of imprisoning certain members of the congress by declaring himself dictator and suspending the clause of the constitution which grants immunity from arrest and judicial action to such officials. According to his decree this condition will obtain until after the election, when, he observes with fine humor, he will "render an accounting to the legislative power of the use which he makes of the powers which he assumed by means of this decree."

Truly, an admirable device. The Mexican congress is "dissolved and inhibited to perform their functions." Its members, or some of them, are thrown into prison, contrary to the constitution. "In the meantime," says Huerta, "the executive takes on himself the powers granted by the constitution to the aforementioned departments, and will make use of them by issuing decrees which shall be observed generally, and which he may deem expedient for the public welfare."

When the new congress is elected he may or may not recognize it and permit it to exercise its constitutional functions the chances are that he won't. He has been the Lord High Executioner and the Grand Panjandrum ever since he seized power by causing the assassination of Madero and Saurez, and now he is going to get along without a congress or cabinet.

If there ever was a serious doubt as to the wisdom of the Administration in withholding recognition from this soldier of fortune it is effectively dispelled by his latest coup. Huerta's methods of "restoring peace and establishing stability" might and doubtless would be highly effective if it were not for the American government. But as the permanent head of a neighboring nation he would be as unwelcome as Captain Kidd or Jesse James.

KNIGHTHOOD IN FLOWER

"THE Unexpurgated Case Against Woman Suffrage" is the title of a ponderous volume just published by Sir Almroth Wright, an eminent English physician, and after saying this much it is unnecessary to add that Sir Almroth is a red-hot anti-suffragist. Evidently, too, he is a person of choleric temperament. Extracts from the book, as cabled to this country, indicate that it is a full and unreserved expression of all the bad temper, prejudice, grouchiness and ingrained cussedness stored up in his mentality in a long and distinguished career.

Sir Almroth's fulminations, not merely against suffrage but against the entire race of women, inspire wonderment as to just what their fate would be if he could be its supreme arbiter for awhile. The whole sex is "insolvent," he says, financially, intellectually and morally. "The taxes paid by women would cover only a very small proportion of the establishment charges of the state which would properly be assigned to them." Doubtless, though, he is quite willing to tax them, regardless of their vote.

We learn from this enlightened nobleman that woman is "incapable of physical effort, and incapable of the clear thinking or the moral perceptions which the maintenance of the state requires." Moreover, Sir Almroth's mother and his wife (if he is burdened with such nuisances) will be pleased to learn from his book that woman is almost "without moral sense" as regards ideals of abstract justice and truth.

And finally we come to this tender tribute to womanhood:

"In this matter one would not be very far from the truth if one alleged that there are no good women, but only women who have lived under the influence of good men."

Verily, the days of chivalry are revived in England, and Sir Almroth Wright is the knighthest figure in all the kingdom.

UNDERWOOD AND RYAN

THE tilt between Representatives Underwood and Hobson in the House showed that the former clearly has the sympathy of most members, but it remains to be seen whether he will have the more important support of public opinion. Hobson charged Underwood with being a "tool of Wall Street," and cited as evidence that Thomas F. Ryan, head of the Tobacco Trust, contributed $35,000 to his campaign fund last year when he was seeking the Democratic presidential nomination.

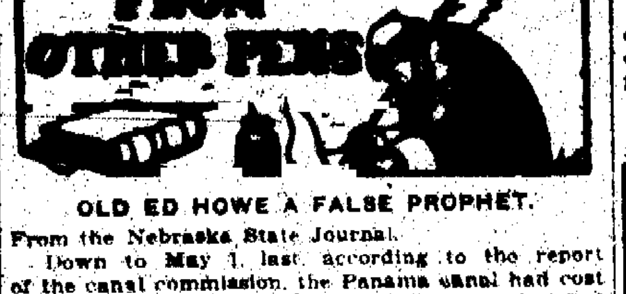

Now it happens that Mr. Ryan is a gentleman whose financial support, if made public, is more harmful than beneficial. The most telling blow which Bryan directed against Champ Clark in the Baltimore convention was the accusation that Ryan was a backer of the Missourian's candidacy. It did more to put Clark out of the running than anything else, and Mr. Underwood may find need of all his recently acquired prestige to save himself from a like fate in his senatorial race.

STREET RAILWAY FARES

MR. GEORGE H. HARRIES, president of the American Electric Railway Association, told the convention of that body yesterday that "fares will have to be increased if street railway companies are to meet the present day demands of the public and survive." Otherwise, he said, there will be a "succession of more or less destructive experiences, now here, now there."

Mr. Harries has been indulging in a Rip Van Winkle sleep. His idea might have been accepted, however reluctantly, by the public of twenty years ago, but it will only provoke smiles now. The demand nowadays is for lower fares, not higher, and if there is any change at all it will be in that direction.

The street railway company that insists it cannot make respectable earnings without raising fares will be invited to sell its property to the municipality and see what the people can do with it. Indeed, most of them will be lucky if they are not invited to sell anyway.

Down to May 1, last, according to the report of the canal commission, the Panama canal had cost a total of $295,487,518.14. THE TAMMANY PLOT.

Norman Hapgood, in Harper's Weekly.

We are accustomed to thinking of a haunted house as hidden in a clump of sighing evergreens beside a lonely stretch of country road. The window panes are shattered, weeds stand high in the front yard, and a hanging blind creaks dolefully in the breeze. A modern contrast to this impression may be found in the heart of New York city. A vacant hotel stands so close to Times square that the glare of Broadway is the only illumination required to show the real estate agent's sign that the property is to be disposed of. A little more than a year ago, some gunmen drove up before this building in a yellow motor car. They murdered a gambler and drove away. They felt safe, for they were in cooperation with the powers high up in Tammany hall, who had been accustomed to delivering immunity for the worst of crimes.

This time, the gunmen did not get the safety on which they counted. They are in prison, and they are among those most interested in the outcome of this election. The hotel, soon after the shooting, went out of business for lack of custom. It opened under another name, but met no better fortune, and had to close again. For months, it has stood vacant. Is it haunted by the blood of Hermann Rosenthal? At any rate the people of New York, if they have any sensitiveness must feel that episode as a horrid dream. If they have any enterprise, any character, any will to achieve free government, they will not vote on November 4 to put the gunmen back in power, and to open the treasury of the city to Charles Murphy and his friends.

ROME

BY GEORGE FITCH

Author of "At Good Old Siwash"

Rome, the capital of Italy, and the world's metropolis of broken-nosed stone statues, is the greatest come-back town of history.

Two thousand years ago Rome was the greatest city in the world. It had a million citizens, and when it got mad at a nation a thousand miles away, that nation promptly retired from business and opened up under a new name and management. Rome was a marvel of stone and marble, and was so glorious that those who lived elsewhere were called barbarians, and were only used for lion food in the great city when they were captured. But Rome got into politics; the cost of living went up, and a job lot of emperors, whose careers made Harry Thaw's look like that of a Sunday school boy, got hold of the town. The result was, Rome fell. The citizens departed, the postoffice was closed up, the roof of the board of trade caved in and chickweed grew in the great forum. Geographers forgot to put it on the map, census enumerators passed it by, and the lowly polecat made its lair unhindered in the palaces of the mighty barbarians.

"Mining for ancient statuary is one of the city's most profitable occupations."

For several centuries Rome was deader than Damascus, and everyone allowed that a mighty fine corn country was being spoiled by the ruins of a punk town. But gradually the city began to come back. The chamber of commerce secured the headquarters of the Christian religion, then a struggling institution, and Rome began to boom again. By 1500 A. D. Rome was running the world once more, and it has continued to take a big hand in history ever since.

Rome now has 600,000 people, which is doing pretty well for a deceased town. It is situated on seven hills, and the Tiber, which has never been improved for navigation by river shipping to the poor grade of Roman . . . which have been . . . Rome is a bustling modern town sit[uated] in, around and on top of the old Rome. It has factories, wholesale houses and street cars, a health commission and a publicity bureau. It has many new buildings, but none as grand or extensive as the structures which were left 1,500 years ago by the Romans when they hurriedly packed up and left. The Roman housewife hangs out her modern wash where Roman emperors once dined on nightingales' tongues, and when the Roman taxicab driver struggles for his fare the Roman Coliseum where once 300,000 people yelled for blood, echoes back his . . . words.

Rome is the world's headquarters for sculptors, artists and architects. Mining for ancient statuary is one of the city's most profitable occupations, and almost daily the humble ditch digger swears as he stubs his spade on the classic brow of a marble statue, which was greatly admired 2,000 years ago.

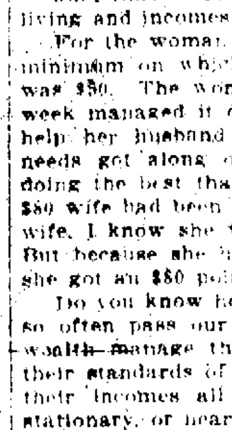

Rome will have a million inhabitants again some day, and they will be much better behaved than the original million, even if they do not produce so impressive a skyline.

Living Within Our Incomes

BY RUTH CAMERON

A friend of mine, whose husband probably earns about $4,000 a year, told me the other day that she had great difficulty in keeping her household budget—including rent, domestic service, food and fuel—down to $50 a week. "It seems a good deal," she admitted, "but most of my friends spend about that. I don't really see how one can do it for less and live decently."

As I listened to her, there came into my mind two different and yet similar complaints to which I had listened.

The first was from a woman whose husband earns in the neighborhood of $2,000 a year. "I've done my best," she said, "but I can't keep our household expenses below $22 a week, and when clothes and spending money and doctor's bills and all the unexpected extras have to come out of the other $17, that doesn't leave much to save, but I simply can't see how we could live comfortably on any less."

The second statement came from a sweet little wife whose husband's salary is $25 a week. "We spend exactly $17 a week on our housekeeping," she said. "I wish we could save more, but we really can't live comfortably on any less with things costing as they do."

And now I suppose you want to know what I'm aiming at with all these figures?

Just this. The tenacity with which standards of living and incomes cling together.

For the woman with the $80 a week income, the minimum on which one could decently keep house was $50. The woman who had to reckon on $40 a week managed it on $22; and the wife who had to help her husband spread $25 over all the family needs got along on $17. Each one said she was doing the best that could be done. And yet, if the $80 wife had been put in place of the $40 or the $25 wife, I know she would have managed very nicely. But because she had the $80 income to help spend, she got an $80 point of view.

Do you know how the foreign-born tortoises who so often pass our American hares in the race for wealth manage that miracle? They just don't let their standards of living keep right on the heels of their incomes all the time. They keep the first stationary, or nearly so, while the other increases.

Yes, I know the American standard of living is a precious thing, and I know it is natural and right for people to want to have pleasanter surroundings, better food, etc., etc., as soon as they are able to. But I do think we could keep a somewhat wider gap between our incomes and our standards of living if we would try to do so.

The ability to save is not a question of possessing any particular amount of money. Like Boston, it's just a state of mind.

Of course, there is such a thing as keeping one's standard of living too far below one's income, but I know very few people who do it. More of us need to remember that if we were earning $5 or $10 less a week we would still manage to live quite comfortably on that much less, and to ask ourselves why we can't do it, anyway.

ODDS AND ENDS

Representative Underwood may not be, as charged by the impetuous Captain Hobson, a tool of Wall street, but at least Thomas Fortune Ryan was willing to risk $35,000 on his being amenable to Wall street reasoning. And Mr. Ryan don't often make mistakes.

The composition of the Colorado Democratic state committee has been definitely determined. It is 55 parts reactionary to 36 parts progressive—that being the vote by which John T. Barnett defeated Thomas J. Tynan for national committeeman. And this notwithstanding Tynan had the support of President Wilson and both Colorado senators.

Progressive Democrats have as much business in the Democratic party as do progressive Republicans in the Republican party. There's only one logical place for them both, and that's in the Progressive party. As long as they remain in the old parties it is an unending fight with the reactionaries, with compromise after compromise.

Thomas J. Tynan ought by this time to have learned this, and Captain Hobson will learn it soon.

The English militants are improving in form. They actually defeated a platoon of police the other night, rescuing Miss Sylvia Pankhurst.

"Gloom prevails in all quarters here."—Dispatch from State university. Boulder's usual wail at this time of the year. Boulder's eleven will probably manage to play out the season, however.

Samuel N. Wheeler of Grand Junction is again being mentioned by the reactionaries as Democratic candidate for governor. His chief qualification for the place is that, as the Denver Democrat says, "he has always been a Democrat."

"The surviving Kansas Progressives declare that they will fight to a finish in 1914. A large majority of the party realize that the finish has already arrived."—Kansas City Journal.

Certainly if the Progressive party is not dead it is not for dearth of obituaries in the standpat press.

Senator George Sutherland of Utah says the Progressive party is dead. He says also that the Republicans ought to elect the next United States senator from Colorado. Which gives some idea of the senator's standing as a prophet.

President Wilson, according to the New York Sun, has abolished cabinet meetings. Who can blame him, with the cabinet he has?

A writer in the New York Evening Post claims that the . . . most wonderfully efficient institution in the whole world is an American battleship. And it's a government institution, run without hope of private monetary gain. Isn't there a hint here for those who fear that, to take away financial competition, will destroy initiative and substitute inefficiency?

"Theodore gives it out raw that he will not affiliate with the standpats—that he has come to the parting of the ways. This is tough on Vermont and our neighbor Utah."—Durango Democrat.

There need be no undue elation on the part of Democrats over the certainty that the colonel will be in the game in 1916. He may give them as much trouble by that time as he gave the Republicans in 1912.

"The tariff bill is a law and we are plum ready for that slump in the cost of living. Congressman Ed Keating and Senator Charlie Thomas will please trot 'er out."—Ault Advertiser.

"Colonel Roosevelt has by this time probably so familiarized himself with the workings of the ship that he has ordered the captain from the bridge, taken charge of the whole blooming works from keel to wheel, laid out a new course and run up the flag of Armageddon. We wouldn't be the least surprised to know also that as a matter of relaxation and exercise he shuts down the engine each day, jumps overboard and tows the boat for a hundred miles or so."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

The standpat newspapers seem to have a mighty good opinion of the colonel's ability.

"We are in favor of the judicial recall because, if we happen to get a saphead on the bench, it is better for public morals to pull him off than for the entire community to remain in perpetual contempt of court."—Nebraska State Journal.

"Progressivism," sneers the New York Evening Post, "is evidently a new dispensation." For once the N. Y. Eve. Post is right.

"The Rev. 'Billy' Sunday will not start a revival campaign in Pittsburg except in a $4,000,000 tabernacle. The high cost of salvation has hitherto escaped conjecture."—Chicago Tribune.

"Now we have the Underwood tariff bill and Congressman Ed Keating is busy trying to figure out how to square it with a lot of angry constituents. If the prices go down as the consumer was promised, the producer will raise a howl. If prices stay up, as the producer is now assured they will, the consumer will be mad. All good rules are popularly believed to work both ways—but not at the same time."—Ault Advertiser.

A LETTER FROM COL. ROOSEVELT

Progressive Leader Makes Clear Situation in New Jersey Campaign

In New Jersey there is a particularly hot gubernatorial campaign this fall. The Democratic candidate for governor has President Wilson's personal backing, but the state Democratic machine has been seized by the old gang, under Nugent and "Jim" Smith. The Republican candidate is former Governor Stokes, personally a clean candidate, but backed by the old Republican machine, who, behind him, hope to get back into control. The Progressive candidate is Everett Colby, a leader of progressives before there was a Progressive party. Just before he left for his trip to South America, Colonel Roosevelt sent the following letter to Mr. Colby:

My Dear Mr. Colby:

I wish I were to be in the United States this fall so that I could [help] in your campaign. You represent the sane and high-minded radicalism which is real conservatism.

I have recently been reading Brooks Adams' book, "Theory of Social Revolution." In speaking of the great French statesman Turgot, he quotes Turgot's remark that "well-timed reform alone averts revolution." Turgot was no revolutionist, and the revolution with all its horrors was brought on by the fact that the so-called conservatives refused to follow Turgot in his wise, fair and absolutely indispensable proposals for industrial reform.

It seems to me that the Progressive attitude is peculiarly well set forth by you and the Progressives in New Jersey at this time. Every corrupt boss, every big corrupt financial magnate and, above all, those who seek to perpetuate the rule of business through a combination of what is crooked in business and crooked in politics recognise in the Progressive party, and specifically in you and the New Jersey Progressive, their worst enemies.

You are fighting the battle not only of all Progressives, but of the honest rank and file of both the old parties in your welfare against the machines of both the old parties. You are endeavoring to put the government of this country abreast of the industrial and social needs of the country.

The effort is being made by your Republican opponents to say that they intend to reorganize the Republican party of New Jersey. On this argument they appeal for the support of the young men. Until they prove their faith by their works, it is idle for them to make such a plea.

The same bosses who wrecked the party a year ago as a sequel to swindling and cheating the rank and file out of their rights are still in control of the party organization, and are striving to come back into power by putting forward men who are ready to make promises which the bosses have not the slightest intention of permitting them to keep.

The rank and file of the Republicans of New Jersey were the men who were most scandalously and infamously betrayed by the bosses at Chicago a year ago. These bosses declined to allow the rank and file to name their own candidates or enunciate their own platform. Until the Republican organization has actually purged itself, and until it accepts in good faith every single plank of the Progressive platform, it is idle for them to make any protestations of good intentions.

For instance, the Republican machine, after its crushing defeat in the primaries of last year, reappointed Mr. Franklin Murphy as its titular, no less than its de facto, boss. Until Mr. Murphy and all the men like him have definitely been retired from leadership, it is a mere absurdity to say that the Republican party of New Jersey has returned to the cause of honesty, or abandoned that system of crooked interrelationship between the bosses and the big business which resulted in depriving the rank and file of their power over the machine.

In closing, and wishing you the success which you so deserve, I cannot refrain from referring to your great fight of eight years ago, which first drew national attention to New Jersey as a progressive state, and to the consistent, tireless fight which you have waged, in season and out of season, to keep her so. You are the pioneer Progressive of New Jersey.

Wishing you all success,

Faithfully yours,

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

A SUBJECT NATION

The United States is yet English led and English ruled.—Ambassador Page.

Somehow we sort of fancied that the Boys from Valley Forge
In our history's early morning had walked out on old King George.
Long we've cherished the delusion that that since old Ben Franklin's day
We had cheerfully been travelling our independent way.
We thought that we had struggled free from sceptre and from throne
And after our own modest way were going it alone.
But Page has showed us our mistake, and now, alas, we see
That through these wasted years we've just imagined we were free.

When Mr. Washington stepped out and took Cornwallis' sword
Right after we had walloped the remaining British horde,
We thought he'd done a first-class job
and that our infant nation
Had made good every promise in its glorious Declaration.
But Page, it seems, thinks otherwise.
He makes it very plain
That all that bitter seven years of fighting was in vain.
Despite the Yorktown episode we still are held in thrall.
Our necks are bowed 'neath British heels, and we're not free at all.

We liked to think that John Paul
Jones, with sassiness and ease,
Had showed the Britons that we had the right to sail the seas.
We thought that when that second war was fought and won at last
That all the nations would admit our servitude was past.
Our statesmen all took off their coats and set to work to run
The land as they saw fit, nor asked advice from any one.
They did this to the present day, but now Page comes along
And in his frank and breezy way assures us they were wrong.

"We're English led and English ruled," says Page; yet here and there
Are people who don't know it yet, so let us not despair.
Some ninety millions who, believe in their deluded way
That they will be the bosses of their country, come what may.
But if some proof of their domain the British really need
We cheerfully will give 'em Page.
He'll do to ride and lead.
—James J. Montague, in the New York American.

Publicity Plans for Springs Gulf Road

Reports from a recent meeting at Amarillo, Tex., of the executive board of the Colorado-to-the-Gulf highway, are that extensive plans are being made to have the proposed road well represented at the coming state fair at Dallas.

According to the word received a large map of the sections through which the highway is to pass will be constructed and upon this map each of the principal cities and all of the county seats along the route will be shown by incandescent lights. Beginning at Galveston the lights will flash on consecutively to Colorado Springs, and in this way one's eye will follow along the route, noting each town as it comes into view on the map.

In addition to the map and light display, books descriptive of the route will be handed out from a booth, and also pictures of the road from Colorado Springs to Pueblo, and scenes of the Pikes Peak region will be exhibited.

DR. W. F. SLOCUM TO TALK ON INTERNATIONAL PEACE

President W. F. Slocum of Colorado college will address the first supper of the Brotherhood class of the First Congregational church tomorrow evening at 6:30 o'clock, on the subject of "International Peace." President Slocum was one of the American delegates to The Hague peace conference this summer, and his talk will be based largely upon his work there. All men of the city who are interested are invited. Those who expect to attend are asked to notify E. B. Besson, Main 2747, at once.

KEELER AND MRS. RUSSUM NOT GUILTY UNDER LAW

Declaring that the defendants were morally guilty, but that they had committed no criminal offense under the Colorado statutes, Judge John W. Sheafor of the district court yesterday directed a verdict for the defendants in the cases of Mrs. Jacquemena Russum, of Chicago, and Francis W. Keeler, a Denver broker, who were charged with a statutory offense.

"The statute ought to punish this offense," said the court in a statement to the jury. "If I permitted this case to go to you for consideration, I am confident the supreme court would reverse me. It is my duty to direct you to return a verdict of not guilty."

Judge Sheafor, in his statement, said that under the Colorado statute the offense must be open. He said that no one here knew that Keeler and Mrs. Russum were not man and wife.

Assistant District Attorney Burns made a spirited argument against the motion of the defendants' attorneys for a directed verdict. He said that if the contention of the defendants was upheld, strangers might invade this city and state and stay at the best hotels in defiance of all the moral laws of society, and go unpunished.

EL PASO COUNTY WILL DEMAND SQUARE DEAL

Commissioners May Go to Court in Effort to Have Various County Valuations Equalized

El Paso county may go into the courts to try to force an equalization unless the state board of equalization acts in accordance with the recommendations of the state tax commission and equalizes the valuations in the various counties of Colorado. Efforts are being made by Denver county to nullify the work of the tax commission, and it is thought the effort may be successful in part. The following opinion was expressed yesterday by County Commissioner Van E. House:

"There is a question whether the tax commission exceeded its powers in arbitrarily valuing local corporations. Personally, I do not believe that it had any right to fix values of corporations that are purely local. I believe the street railway company, electric light company, etc., should have been valued by the county assessor.

"In view of the tax commission's recommendations, Assessor Gwillim made a very fair value of El Paso county as a whole. But unless its recommendations are accepted by the board of equalization, El Paso county must seek relief in the courts. Unless the valuations in other counties are equalized with El Paso county, then this county must seek a reduction, so that it will not pay more than its just proportion of state tax.

"There are two courses left open. The commissioners may go into court and mandamus the assessor to equalize valuations by making reductions in accordance with a schedule prepared by us, or this relief must be sought by any taxpayer. I know of a dozen property owners who are ready to take this action.

"The commissioners have decided upon no definite course of action. We will make no decision until the work of the tax commission has been ruled upon."

El Paso county's valuation was advanced one-tenth of 1 per cent by the tax commission, which raised the values in practically every county in the state.

NEW STOPOVER FEATURE BRINGS MANY VISITORS

The colonists' rates which have been in effect for the last 15 days are now off, and according to the railroad office statements the travel to Colorado Springs was heavy. At the Denver & Rio Grande office fully 300 tickets were deposited for the 10-day stopover privilege, and it is estimated that at least 500 stopped here including those who did not deposit their tickets for the full 10-day limit. The people thus brought to this city were from all parts of eastern United States and the Springs received much advertisement because of the 10-day stopover feature which was new this year.

SCHOOL TEACHERS WILL HOLD RECEPTION SOON

Annual Event, Which Includes Banquet, to Be Given at Antlers Early Next Month

Plans for the school teachers annual reception and banquet are well under way, and the affair probably will be held at the Antlers hotel about November 1. A committee consisting of L. B. Grafton, principal of Garfield school; Mrs. Anna M. Rudy, principal of Buena Vista school, and H. A. Nye of the High school is now working to complete the final arrangements. They are in touch with several prominent men they are trying to secure for the main address of the evening, but as yet have no one definitely engaged, and on this account cannot definitely fix the date of the banquet.

This affair has become annual and is a reception of the old teachers to the new ones of the corps. It usually attracts a representative audience of those in the city interested in educational progress, as the teachers have the privilege of inviting guests.

Pueblo Couple Come Here to be Married

Unmindful of the pleadings of her parents over the long distance telephone, Miss Helen Stoddard, formerly a student at Colorado college, and J. L. Gottlieb, a violinist, were married here yesterday. The girl and the man of her choice slipped away from Pueblo earlier in the day and the marriage is regarded by their friends as an elopement.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. W. H. Stoddard of Pueblo, a prominent physician and writer, and it is declared that at the Antlers hotel where the newlyweds stopped for a few hours last evening that there were telephone calls from Pueblo asking them to reconsider their determination to marry. The young woman attended Colorado college two years ago but at the close of the term decided not to return. She next attended a fashionable finishing school at Nashville, Tenn.

Gottlieb, who registered at the Antlers yesterday giving New York as his address, is well known in musical circles in Pueblo and is considered an expert violinist. His bride is also musical. The first intimation here of the wedding was early last evening when Mrs. Gottlieb chanced to meet a number of college people in the hotel lobby. She rushed over to them and presented Gottlieb as her husband.

Aunt Sally's Advice to Beauty-Seekers

"W. C. D. says: "My face is freckled the year round; nothing I try seems to help much. Is there anything that will really take off these horrid spots?" Have you tried the treatment recommended to Minnie L.? I've known this to remove very obstinate freckles.

Ellen B. asks: "What should I do for deep lines under my eyes and across my forehead?" Such lines, and all wrinkles, are best obliterated by bathing affected portions in a good astringent and tonic lotion, which strengthens and draws in the relaxed tissue. Here's a reliable formula: 1 oz. powdered saxolite, ½ pt. witch hazel; mix and use daily until entirely relieved.

Minnie L.: The undue redness as well as the pimples, may easily be removed by using ordinary mercolized wax. Apply nightly like cold cream and erase mornings with warm water. Soon you'll have a beautifully white, clear, soft and velvety complexion. Mercolized wax, sold by all druggists, is better than cosmetics for any complexion trouble. One ounce suffices for most conditions.—Woman's Realm. Adv.

$20,000 SEMINARY PLANNED FOR FORT COLLINS, COLO.

FORT COLLINS, Colo., Oct. 14.—A $20,000 theological seminary will be built in Fort Collins by the German Evangelical Church of North America. A rumor that such an institution was to be located here has been current for several days, but confirmation was lacking until today, when the Rev. E. T. Battex, the officer of the church, stated he had completed a deal for a site for the seminary and that it was to be established immediately. The synod of the church in session in Louisville, Ky., a week ago, appropriated $20,000 for the building of the institution and passed a resolution guaranteeing $5,000 a year for its maintenance.

Work on the institution will be started immediately and students are expected within the next few weeks. Temporary quarters will be used until the seminary is completed. Fort Collins was selected for the location of the institution on account of its climate and environments.

WATER POWER DEVELOPMENT IN COLORADO FORESTS

Projects involving 8,800 horsepower have been completed in Colorado up to June 30, 1913, according to figures compiled by the government showing the status of water power developments on the national forests. Works which will produce 1,900 horsepower are under construction and 4,400 horsepower will be generated by projects planned and in a preliminary stage of development.

In California, Oregon and Washington 78,000 horsepower have been actually developed; 107,000 horsepower are under way, and 476,000 horsepower are planned.

Figures for all the national forests show a total of 789,000 horsepower in sight through plans approved by the Forest service. Of this amount 111,000 are already completed. Works planned to produce 123,000 are being built and other enterprises which will eventually yield 4,400 have been started.

The government estimates of horsepower capacity have been based on minimum streamflow data under original conditions. The installed plant machinery is said to be capable of developing at least twice the amount estimated.

All Clogged Up? Here's Quick Relief

A Si p'e Remedy to Correct Constipation Before It Be- co ,e'a Chronic.

Very few people go through life without some time or other being troubled with constipation. Thousands injure themselves by the use of strong cathartics, salts, mineral waters, pills and similar things. They have temporary value in some cases, it is true, but the good effect is soon lost, and the more one takes of them the less effective they become.

A physic or purgative is seldom nec-ess-ry, and much better and more permanent results can be obtained by using a scientific remedy like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It does not hide behind a high sounding name, but is what it is represented to be, a mild laxative medicine. It is so mild that thousands of mothers give it to tiny infants, and yet it is so compounded, and contains such definite ingredients that it will have equally good effect when used by a person suffering from the worst chronic constipation. In fact, among the greatest endorsers of Syrup Pepsin are elderly people who have suffered for years and found nothing to benefit them until they took Syrup Pepsin.

It is a fact that millions of families have Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin constantly in the house, homes like those of Mr. H. W. Fenstermaker, Siegfried, Pa. He says he has had wonderful results from the use of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, that, in fact, he has never found a remedy so good, and he is glad to recommend it. The special value of this grand laxative tonic is that it is suited to the needs of every member of the family. It is pleasant-tasting, mild and non-griping. Unlike harsh physics, it works gradually and in a very brief time the stomach and bowel muscles are trained to do their work naturally again, when all medicines can be dispensed with.

Thyroid Treatment Is Successfully Given to Denver Girl of Seven

DENVER, Oct. 14.—In the county hospital is a case of thyroid treatment, which has surprised the doctors in attendance. Seven-year-old Nina Nodine, who for one year and a half has been taking the thyroid treatment, has developed to a stage where she is able to form words of three syllables. It is rarely that the thyroid treatment given at as late a stage as it was administered to the Nodine child has the effect which is noticeable in the case of the county hospital patient. The lack of the gland in which goiter develops precludes a child from maturing beyond the point reached by a three-year-old. With the administration of the thyroid treatment begun at two or three years of age, the person afflicted may develop into a fairly self-reliant individual.

If the treatment is delayed until the child is older, he rarely can be made even a high-grade imbecile.

Nina Nodine was almost six years old before she was taken to the county hospital for experimental treatment.

Evangelist Delivers Sermon From Beer Keg in Saloon; Converts 12

MACON, Mo., Oct. 14.—Robert Jones, an evangelist, turned "Bob" Thomas' saloon into a revival meeting here, mounted a beer keg to deliver a sermon and converted a dozen frequenters. The evangelist had been invited to the saloon by its owner.

"The proprietor of this place," said Mr. Jones, "has invited us to hold religious services, giving us an opportunity to talk to men we might not otherwise have met. I love him and all these men about me, but I am against the liquor business. A saloon keeper, however, is not as bad as the church member who slips in at the back door and gets his drink."

Will Be No Change of Government in Panama Till Canal Is Working

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—Until the commerce of the world actually is flowing smoothly through the Panama canal, no change in either the operation of the big ditch or in the government of the canal zone will be made. This became known today. It developed also that through this decision President Wilson planned to pay a delicate compliment to the men who have accomplished the herculean task of joining the oceans, by giving them the opportunity to enjoy the fruition of their labors. Congress has provided for a civil government for the zone, but for the time being its control will be left to the Isthmian canal commission and the army engineers.

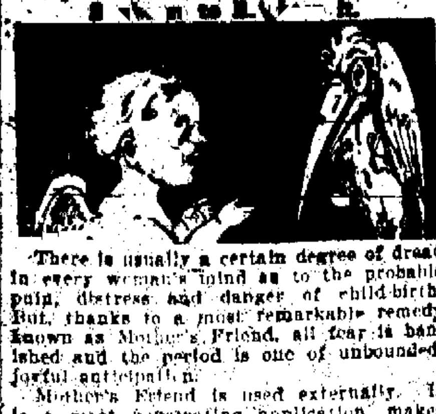

PANAMA DEVELOPMENT CO. HEAD CHARGED WITH FRAUD

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 14.—The trial of Dr. John Grant Lyman, head of the Panama Development company, charged with having perpetrated fraud by use of the mail in the operations of the company, opened here today in the United States district court. Witnesses from Panama and the Philippines were among those called to testify. Lyman was arrested in San Francisco about two years ago. He escaped from custody and was recaptured in Oregon. Convicted on a charge of having attempted to bribe an officer to gain his liberty, he was sentenced to 18 months in the federal penitentiary at McNeils Island, Washington, the fraud proceedings being postponed until that sentence had been served.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

TRY GRANDMOTHER'S OLD FAVORITE RECIPE OF SAGE TEA AND SULPHUR

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and luster to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy. Sailors May Refuse to Ship on Any Sea Going Craft Without Wireless

LONDON, Oct. 14.—The executive council of the National Sailors and Firemen's union at an emergency meeting today decided to take a ballot of members of the union on the question whether they were prepared to refuse, after May 1, 1914, to ship on board any ocean going craft not equipped with wireless.

The council expressed the opinion that much loss of life on cargo boats could be avoided if they were equipped with wireless apparatus at a cost of $2,000 a year for each vessel. Seamen of other nations will be invited to join in the movement.

BUST OF LINCOLN WILL BE SOLD UNDER HAMMER

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—Abraham Lincoln, the great emancipator, who saved the slaves from the market place and the block, will be placed on the block himself in effigy tomorrow and sold by the United States government to the highest bidder. New York Theatrical Letter

By EMORY B. CALVERT

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—To what strange uses the American stage is destined to be put is too much for a man with an average mind like my own to guess. Just now it looks indeed as if a section of the stage were going to be appropriated to the exploiting of all sorts of scientific and sociological doctrines. Ever since the New York Medical society came to the rescue of that French hereditary taint play, "Damaged Goods," and saved it from the austere oblivion which threatened it, other similar bodies have been getting busy. We are now promised that within the next few weeks we are to be invited to take a look at a play which cuts boldly into the very heart of our social and ethical standards. For several days the metropolitan press has been filled with this threatened production which is called "The Guilty Man." This piece, which is being sponsored by certain sociological and medical organizations of a very grave and dignified standing, will have two propositions to put before its audiences. The first is the annulling of the law which imposes a fine of $5,000 and imprisonment for five years on any doctor who enlightens a woman on how to prevent offspring. The second "mission" is to secure the passing of a law giving children of the left hand the right to their father's name; in other words, making their birth legitimate.

It is not my province to argue the right or wrong of these propositions. Anyone who has a thimble full of brains knows there are conditions in the world into which a child should not be born. And on the second issue anyone with a mind for justice realizes that a child, being in no way responsible for the conditions of its birth, should not be subjected to any social disabilities therefor. But, as I said before, the propositions are far too serious for me to discuss here.

It is merely this stage aspect of the thing that interests me now. Despite the fact that I dearly love to see a person take a crack, now and then, at some of the foolish and moth-eaten conventions of society, I am inclined to deprecate a movement which has a tendency to turn the stage into a medical clinic or a forum of polemics. The question is, Where will it end? It seems to me that if these scientific and admittedly honorable and estimable men and women feel that such legislation should be accomplished, the proper field for their activities is the halls of the legislature. This, I think, would be far better than loading our stage with revolting pictures of life, scenes so repulsive that whatever art they may possess is lost. No doubt society is very, very wrong in a number of things. All is not right with the world. Everybody knows that. But is the stage the medium through which these wrongs can be righted? Will it do any good? I, for one, am disposed to think that it will do more harm than good; that it will undermine the theater as a recreation and eventually lose whatever effectiveness it might have as a medium of intellectual and moral betterment.

"THE WILL."

In "The Will" we find J. M. Barrie quite away from that gentle, delicate whimsicalness by which we have come to love him. This playlet in three scenes is patterned somewhat after "Milestones," inasmuch as it shows the progress of people through a long course of years. It was produced at the Empire theater on Monday night with John Drew and Mary Boland in the leading roles. The story is of a young man, newly married, who goes to a solicitor's office to make his will. His wife is with him. At this time he is but a poor clerk. The young couple are very much in love and Mary Boland makes a very pretty picture in the first scene when she weeps at the mention of "will" and "death," etc. In the next scene the husband is middle aged and prosperous and the wife is entirely cold and worldly. They have a son at Eton. She presses for every thing she can get into the "will" for herself. In the last scene the man is a knight. His wife is dead and his son has disgraced him. There is no one to leave his millions to. While there are, here and there, touches of the old Barrie, there seems to be running through it a strain of bitterness, of disillusionment which we do not like to see in connection with the beloved author of "Peter Pan."

Following this playlet came a revival of Haddon Chamber's "The Tyranny of Tears" with John Drew in his old role, which he created 14 years ago. To say that he was even more delightful that ever is merely stating the truth. Mary Boland as the poor little stenographer, who loved her employer so hopelessly, because, unlike the modern stage stenographer, she was guileless, was as beseeching as possible.

Laura Hope Crew as the wife played her part to perfection, and Julian L'Estrange as the long suffering friend was most excellent. Mr. Drew received many curtain calls, for it was such a pleasure to see this estimable actor in evening clothes again, with all his old sang froid, his whimsical humor, and not battling with the intricate heroics of Shakespeare's Benedick.

"SHADOWED."

Of all the innocuous, inconsequential things that have been hurled at the heads of New York theatergoers for the past decade "Shadowed" is entitled to the prize. This melodrama, for such it was billed, made its appearance at the Fulton theater on Tuesday night. The Fulton is where they have been playing "Damaged Goods" and that company must have left some as a legacy to their successor.

It is hardly worth while to say any more about the affair for if we are correctly informed it is now reposing in the junk room of a Seventh avenue storage plant.

But inasmuch as mention has been made of it, perhaps a little more should be added. But not much more than the fact that "Shadowed" was written by Dion Clayton Calthrop and Cosmo Gordon Lennox and was produced by James Forbes. Hereafter Mr. Forbes will probably hesitate before producing a play solely on the strength of its author's imposing patronymic. These authors supplied Mr. Forbes with an unending wilderness of aimless and pointless talk surrounding a "crook," a bank, a girl pal of the "gang" who wants to go "right," a bank robbery, some torn post cards found in a volume of Marcus Aurelius, which, so far as I could tell, had no more purpose to serve than to show that the authors had heard of Marcus Aurelius.

"HALF AN HOUR" AND "THE YOUNGER GENERATION."

Thursday night was one of the most joyous I ever spent at the Lyceum theater. I found Grace George at a little bit better than her best. I found J. M. Barrie at a little bit better than his best in many respects and Mrs. Stanley Houghton, author of "The Younger Generation" better than ever. What more could one ask?

"Half an Hour" is the new Barrie playlet which is likely to be the most sensational hit of the season. The plot is so unique—so absolutely original. Here we have the eternal triangle with a new angle to it, and that new angle is worked out with an absolutely artistic precision. A married woman is in love with a bachelor. She has had a nasty quarrel with her husband as the play opens and she decides to make the leap. She gets in touch with her lover over the phone and it is arranged for them to meet in his apartments at once. She strips herself of all the jewels her husband had given her, she will have nothing of "his." Then she writes a farewell note to the husband, wraps it around her wedding ring and puts it where he is sure to find it. The next scene is the lover's apartments. They decide to go to Egypt. As soon as she is divorced they will marry. They must live their own lives—they are entitled to happiness. Thus far you have been borne along on the stale, conventional wave of the triangle. Now comes the Barrie inspiration. The lover leaves the apart[ment] to get their tickets. While crossi[ng the] street he is run over by an aut[o and] killed. There she is. Alone [in his] apartments with all her b[ridges] burned. A doctor comes. He [...] his friend is not married so he a[sks] the woman to leave at once, to sa[ve her] face. He shrewdly surmises, fro[m her] dress and manner, that she is a [well] born, married woman. She leave[s for] home—that is the only place [...] In the meantime the doctor has ar[rived] at her home. He is an old frie[nd of] her husband's although he had [never] seen her before. She comes in [while] the two men are discussing the accident. The husband has foun[d the] jewels but not the note. The insi[st]ing talk of the doctor brings the [hus]band to the point of discovery and [his] wife to the brink of hysteria [...] furnishes Miss George with an inte[nse]ly dramatic moment, and in a [...] flourish of finely suppressed [...] takes the doctor's arm and they [go] in to dinner. The [...] was played with [...] H. E. Herbert. The other [...] the cast are all very [...]

Succeeding the Barrie playlet [was] Stanley Houghton's latest comedy, [The] Younger Generation." This is a sp[len]did British comedy, beautifully pl[ayed.] It deals with the revolt of the you[nger] generation, two sons and a d[aughter,] against the narrowness of th[e] stodginess which survives from the Victoria era. While the condi[tions] with which the play deals are b[etter] understood in England than o[ver here] it is a delightful little comedy. A[nd it] was played with an exquisite t[ouch.] The elder son who steals a latch [key,] the younger son who drinks [...] the daughter who runs away with [the] man of her choice are the three r[evo]lutionary stands taken by "The You[ng]er Generation" against their [father's] rigid rule. An uncle from Germ[any] who has imbibed the free life there champions the cause of the [sons] and daughter and turns the table[s on] the smug father by telling, right [out] loud, of a number of that gentlem[an's] youthful exploits.

Sidney Erewitt, who played the [role] of the father, was delightfully soi[...] Katherine MacPherson as the daug[hter] was the wholesome young Engl[ish] woman to perfection.

[F]OOTBALL STYLES IN WEST ARE VASTLY DIFFERENT FROM THOSE SHOWN IN EAST

[B]igger Universities Seldom Use Brainstorm Plays Unless All Else Seems Lost

By RIGHT WING.

[F]ootball generalship has varied [gr]eatly year in and year out, accord[ing] to the plans of various coaches and [ge]ographical situation. In the west, [fo]r instance, there has been a tendency [to]ward the unexpected, toward wide-[op]en play with all the chances, offen[si]ve and defensive, that that type of [pl]ay offers. This has led, naturally [en]ough, to extreme emphasis on the [at]tack. In the east, on the other hand, [it] may be said in a general way that [th]e defense is considered of prime im[po]rtance, and for that reason the at[ta]ck has often lacked the brilliancy of [th]e westerners. The eastern idea, in [th]e main, has been first to keep the [foe] from scoring and then turn loose [th]e attack after the enemy had been [th]oroughly held in check.

For this reason eastern teams as a [ru]le make far less of the running [ga]me on their own side of the field [th]an is the case in the west. Nor are [ea]stern elevens prone to the so-called ["b]rainstorm" plays until all seems to [be] lost and there is every reason for [ta]king any sort of chance, no matter [ho]w wild. One fundamental principle, [ho]wever, is found in both sections—[pl]ay fast with the wind and as slowly [as] possible against it. With the wind [th]e kicking game is called into action, [an]d with anything like an adequate [de]fense, it is apparent that the defen[di]ng team cannot long retain posses[si]on of the ball, and there is not any [re]ason why every effort should not [be] made to force a team already at a [he]avy disadvantage into making er[ror]s.

[T]his policy was seen in perfection [las]t year at Harvard, and there is [ev]ery indication that it will be con[tin]ued this year at Cambridge, where [th]e coaches make a specialty of teach[ing] the punters now to place their [kic]ks. With a fast set of forwards [fol]lowing the ball, this type of game [is] extremely difficult to face, and time [an]d again results in the making of [ru]nning openings. I am inclined to [bel]ieve that when the big games swing [aro]und, the important teams will be [usi]ng the long kicking game for all it [is] worth, and thus following closely in [th]e footsteps of last year's Harvard [ele]ven. The smaller elevens, too, [pro]bably will work out their campaigns [mu]ch along the same lines, so that in [th]e end play on the defensive side of the field should be very nearly uniform.

It is only after the team has crossed the center of the field that the eastern elevens may be expected to show wide variations in generalship. There will be teams that will stake their all on the successful use of the forward pass, and others that will cling to the close running game in the hope of keeping up the average of two and one-half yards to each down necessary to a march across the goal line, using the forward pass not so much in the hope of scoring with it as with the intent of spreading the defense so that the runner on the straight plays may be sent clear through to the secondary defense. Teams like Harvard, Yale and Princeton and Pennsylvania doubtless will "mix 'em up" better than elevens that have not the benefit of such clever coaching, although I am inclined to think that the Quakers will show more versatility in open play than any of the others.

Pennsylvania's generalship has always been of the daring order, and it has served so well in the past that I doubt if Brooks will depart widely from it, although I feel sure that he will turn out a team better versed in the fundamentals and boasting of a more powerful running attack than has been the case for some time. Pennsylvania has always made much of the forward pass and the onside kick, and the Quakers are never afraid, apparently, to let go of the ball. The Red and Blue has already made better use of the 10-yard forward pass territory behind the goal line than any other eleven in the east, and I should not be surprised to see Brook's pupils continue to do in the course of the big games.

Harvard's attack probably will be much closer than Pennsylvania's, once across the center of the field, and Yale, too, probably will show a strong running game, once in the enemy's country. Harvard has a set of heavy backs, men who keep their feet well when tackled, and so the Crimson can make use of well-conceived plays off tackle and guard as the goal line is approached, with little resort to open play. Yale's backfield probably will not be as heavy as Harvard's, and it is possible that the Elis will have to go in for a little more variety, but at New Haven, as at Cambridge, there is a strong demand for a revival of the old running game—such a revival as will take the team 20 to 30 yards for a touchdown in a series of plays that will not depend upon the use of the forward pass.

"Princeton, like Pennsylvania, I think, will play a more open game than the others. The Tigers have always taken kindly to the forward pass and, like Pennsylvania, have made much of it from time to time. Princeton, with a heavy line this year, and a backfield of only medium weight, but very fast, is well equipped for wide-open play, and with Hobey Baker at the receiving end of the forward pass, should do considerable damage with that particular play now and then. The generalship of all our teams on their own side of the field I expect to find about the same.

The Carlisle Indians have a generalship all their own. They are amenable, apparently, to none of the laws of play that apply to the colleges who have more at stake, or at least think they have, and are apt to cut loose any sort of play in any part of the field. Warner's formations are always ingenious, and he has the material to make them go. In addition he has considerable weight behind the line this year, and his type of play should show more variety than ever before. Probably a great deal of the running will be done from kick formation, in all parts of the field, for Warner has good kickers to provide the necessary threat, and they are at the same time such good runners as to be able to make plenty of ground even when starting a long distance back of the line.

It takes fine ends to break up Warner's formations, and the kick formation gives his backs such a splendid lateral start that they are usually making great gains when they come up to the line of scrimmage.

[illegible] generalship will be worth watching this year, for it will be the first time in many a long day that the Ithacans will have had anything like a really sound policy on the field. A good [illegible] the Ithacans will map out the day may be noticed from the match with Harvard and of course a blanket will be made in their plan of action before the team meets Pennsylvania. It is improbable that there will be any radical alterations of the basic principles of attack that have been [illegible] Dr. Sharpe. The Ithacans are based at present [illegible] [illegible] something that has not been [illegible] long time and unless [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] of the open game is [illegible] in the chief [illegible] and [illegible] variety I expect of Pennsylvania [illegible] the Thanksgiving day [illegible] Franklin field should be a pretty one.

CHEROKEE MAID, BRIDE OF JIM THORPE

James Thorpe, the Sac and Fox Indian from Oklahoma, who holds the distinction of being the world's greatest athlete, was married yesterday morning to Miss Margaret Iva Miller, a native of Oklahoma and a former student at the Carlisle Indian school, from which Thorpe also graduated. Mr. and Mrs. Thorpe left last night for New York to join the New York Giants on their tour of the world, which, in company with a team of American league players under the direction of Owner Comiskey of the Chicago White Sox, will leave Cincinnati Saturday. Mrs. Thorpe, whose picture is shown here, is a full-blooded Cherokee Indian maid and the romance of the couple had its beginning in their college days at Carlisle.

Thorpe, a great athlete in college, attained the greatest publicity as a result of his wonderful performance at the last Olympic games at Stockholm, which brought him signal honors and the award of the greatest athlete in the world. Then followed the charges of professionalism and Thorpe admitted that he had received money for playing with a small baseball league in the south. All his valuable prizes won at Stockholm were returned and soon after McGraw signed the famous redskin and made him a member of the Giants' squad. As yet Thorpe has not shown sensational [illegible] cleverness as a ball player, but he was taken with the Giants on their spring training trip to Marlin Springs and kept on the bench the greater part of the season.

Association Champions Lose in Third Contest With Western Leaguers

DENVER, Oct. 14.—Denver defeating Milwaukee today by a score of 5 to 2, acquired a margin of one game in the race for the minor leagues championship, the score now standing two games for Denver, one for Milwaukee.

Denver lost no time in its half of the first inning in scoring two runs. Milwaukee managed to tie the score in the third when Denver increased its lead by one run and added two more in the fourth. In the Milwaukee half of the fourth the Association champions were prevented from scoring by a remarkable catch by Channell. He leaped the center field ropes, caught Berg's long drive and held three men on base by a swift return throw.

Denver made four triples in the first four innings.

MISSING BIRDMAN HAS NOT YET BEEN FOUND

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Efforts today to find a trace of Albert J. Jewell, the aviator who disappeared while making a flight in a monoplane to the Staten Island aerodome yesterday morning were fruitless.

Those who have endeavored to trace his course believed that he lost his way, flew out over the Atlantic ocean and perished by drowning.

Fishermen, hunters and school children in Long Island towns between Hempstead, where Jewell ascended, and Rockaway Point recalled today having seen an aeroplane. From their statements there is reason to believe Jewell flew west as far as Springfield and there turned south toward the open sea. Whether strong winds swept him along against his will or he lost his sense of direction is a question. He was flying toward Staten Island, intending to take part in yesterday's aerial derby around Manhattan Island.

W. R. Hervey, a Rockaway fisherman, said today that he saw an aeroplane flying due south a few hours after sun up. The aviator did not appear to be having trouble with his machine, said Hervey.

Tony Jannus, an aviator who flew in the derby yesterday, announced tonight that he would start with a passenger in his biplane at Hempstead tomorrow morning and follow the same course taken by Jewell. Jannus hoped by this flight to get some trace of the missing airman.

GERMAN AVIATOR SETS NEW DURATION RECORD

Stoeffler, in 100-Horsepower Biplane, Covers 1,376 Miles in 22 Hours, 47 Minutes

JOHANNISTHAL, Germany, Oct. 14.—Victor Stoeffler, in a 100-horsepower biplane, has beaten the world's record for a flight covering the period within 24 consecutive hours. He started from here shortly after midnight last night, in competition for the chief prize of the National Aviation subscription, to be awarded for the longest European flight of the season. He landed at Mulhausen at 10:42 o'clock this morning, having covered 1,376 miles. His actual flying time was 22 hours 47 minutes.

Stoeffler flew from Johannisthal to Posen and returned here. Then he flew to Mulhausen and continued to [illegible] and north between Mulhausen and [illegible], making this trip four times.

GOODYEAR BALLOON WINS CUP FOR LONGEST FLIGHT

American Bag Leads in Race for Bennett Cup—Captain Honeywell Also in Contest

PARIS, Oct. 14.—Seventeen of the 18 balloons which started from Paris Sunday afternoon in the international race for the James Gordon Bennett cup have landed. The Goodyear, piloted by the American, Ralph Upson, has covered the longest distance. The Goodyear landed at Bridlington at noon today, having crossed the English channel early in the morning. The distance between Paris and Bridlington in a straight line is more than 400 miles. Upson claims to have covered 550 miles in 42 hours.

The second American balloon, the Uncle Sam, piloted by Captain Honeywell, landed at Cordenials, France, 261 miles from Paris.

The only balloon not yet reported is the Austrian Frankfurt, piloted by Lehnert.

LONDON, Oct. 14.—The balloon Goodyear, with two American aeronauts, Upson and Preston aboard, landed this afternoon near Bridlington, close to the cliffs. Bridlington is in Yorkshire, 26 miles from Hull.

The landing was effected in a wind blowing 40 miles an hour. The aeronauts covered 550 miles in 44 hours. The balloon crossed the English channel from a point near Cherbourg and passed over the neighborhood of Southampton. The English coast was reached about 3 o'clock Tuesday morning and Hull in the forenoon. The landing was made at Bridlington, a little after midday.

FIGHT RESULTS YESTERDAY

AKRON, O., Oct. 14.—Jack Dillon of Indianapolis, aspirant for the middleweight title, won the decision over Walter Monaghan of Canton, in the fourth round of their scheduled 12-round match here tonight. Monaghan's seconds threw a towel into the ring just before the close of the fourth round.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 14.—Frankie Russell of New Orleans had the better of six rounds of a 10-round, no-decision bout with Knockout Brown of New York, here tonight. Brown had [illegible] the better in the ninth round, while the rest were even.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 14.—Marty Rowan of St. Louis, making his debut as a middleweight, was awarded the decision over Billy Papke, one time champion [illegible] after eight very tame rounds of boxing here tonight.

Apropos of nothing, as they say in books, can you imagine a more miserable existence than one in Sugar Land, Texas.

DUNDEE BEATS AZEVEDO

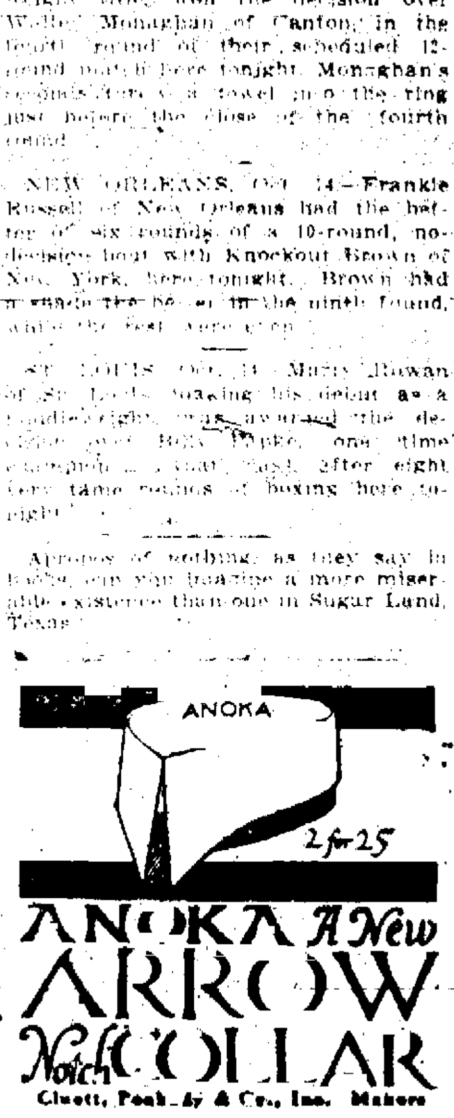

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 14.—Johnny Dundee, New York lightweight, won a decision over Joe Azevedo of Sacramento, Cal., in a 20-round match at Vernon arena tonight. Deputy sheriffs were present to see that the affair was not a prize fight and to stop it if it became one. Azevedo was outclassed.

BALL MERKLE HIT FOR HOMER SOLD AT AUCTION

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—When Fred Merkle scored the first homerun for New York in a world's series game last week by clouting one of Bender's shoots into the bleachers, there was a wild scramble for the ball. The very fact that it had been socked for a four-base smash gave it a great value over its intrinsic worth. As usual a small boy won in the scramble for the ball. He held tight onto it until tempted with a $10 bill.

The bidding for the ball as a souvenir became brisk in no time. A man from New England offered $1. The price was jumped to $3 by a southerner, an admirer of the Giants. Then a New Yorker offered $6 and the boy was about to hand over the ball when the southerner bunched the price to 10 bucks and secured the coveted trophy of the fourth game of the world's series.

Cripple Creek Mines

EL ORO CORPORATION BUYS CARBONATE QUEEN CLAIM

CRIPPLE CREEK, Oct. 14.—The Carbonate Queen lode mining claim, U. S. survey No. 74a, containing approximately ten acres, the Battle Mountain mine, adjoining the Eclipse mine on the southeast, has been purchased for the El Oro Mining and Milling company by R. G. Mullen, the president and general manager of that corporation, from the owners, Dennis Sullivan, vice president of the Denver National bank, and Grant B. Schley, capitalist of New York. The consideration named in the deed of transfer conveying the property was $75,000.

The Carbonate Queen, originally one of the mines owned by the Ophir Mining and Milling company, a close corporation, is partly developed by both shaft and tunnel, and has produced a considerable tonnage of high grade ore. The exact figures on this production are not obtainable but the output may be conservatively estimated at $100,000. The production was made, and the development to date, has been brought about under the leasing system, as the company prosecuted, but little work. The main shaft has been sunk to a depth of 600 feet and the lateral work consisting mainly of drifts and short crosscuts has been limited and does not exceed 3,000 feet. A tunnel was also driven into the claim from Eclipse gulch, and the workings are connected up with those from the Eclipse.

The Carbonate Queen claim is traversed by the northeasterly extension of the main Eclipse vein, the flat westward-dipping vein that has produced such rich mineral in the past. There is in addition a vertical north-south ... ore vein carrying commercial values and ... fissures and veins with an easterly and westerly ...

The El Oro company has recently ... the erection of a lofty Oregon pine gallows frame, and added a powerful electrically driven compressor to its already powerful and modern mine plant, and it is generally believed and expected that the Carbonate Queen and the other Battle mountain holdings of the El Oro company will be developed through the main El Oro shaft on the Eclipse.

Water has prevented active operations in the Carbonate Queen shaft for a long time past, but with the flow controlled by the pumps of the El Oro company, the exploitation of the several veins exposed will now be possible.

A new shoot for the Trilby mine has been opened up by Lessees Olson and Van Tilborg, on the main Gold Sovereign vein, as exposed in the 400-foot level of the Trilby mine workings. The ore as broken fully four feet wide, is a milling ore of good commercial value and will ship at close to one ounce gold or $20 to the ton, and with the shoot more fully exploited may develop higher values.

The Trilby mine is now leased to E. J. Williams, superintendent for the Trilby mines company at the time, the company was operating on its own account, and Olsen and his partner, L. A. Van Tilborg, are operating under a sublease.

The production now holding at from 12 to 16 cars a month, will, it is confidently expected, be materially increased by shipments from the new discovery, while the general average value of the mine's product will be enhanced.

Remarkably fast work is being prosecuted by Carlton and Whitmore, the mining men holding the contract for the driving of the Ingham tunnel lateral exploiting the Ida May territory of the Elkton Consolidated Mining and Milling company, on the northwestern slope of Raven hill.

The contractors have but one machine drill, a No. 8 water Leyner, operated by Frank Stoerist as machine man, engaged in the work, but this capable young miner last month working but 25 shifts, made a mark of 162 feet, or drilled at the rate of 6 feet 6 1-4 inches each shift. The country rock through which the lateral is now passing is breccia of the toughest character.

The lateral projected to connect with the Ida May shaft has already cut the Ida May and other veins of that section.

Returns have been received from the trial shipment made by Thompson and Shaw, from the Caledonia mine, on the southernmost spur of Gold hill, and the settlement at the rate of $35 a ton, will bring about the exploitation of the property on an elaborate scale. The ore shipped was mined from shallow surface workings, but it is now proposed to develop the vein exposed at depth, either from the Caledonia main shaft, by crosscut, or by sinking a new shaft nearer to the vein and accompanying ore shoot.

NEW YORK MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—The general ... of prices which overshadowed all other developments in last week's stock market was resumed today. Prices yielded from 1 to 3 points in many active stocks, while stocks of less prominence lost greater ground. The bulk of the selling occurred during the morning session, followed by extreme dullness and some later recovery, chiefly in United States Steel, Amalgamated Copper and Reading.

While securities were at no time urgently offered, it was plain that supply was somewhat in excess of demand. Among the leaders Southern Pacific was the feature of greatest weakness, its decline to the lowest prices in five years being directly associated with the proposed suit of the government to force dissolution of Southern Pacific and its most valuable asset, Central Pacific.

Surface conditions point to the revival of a large and aggressive short interest, whose operations have taken on greater scope by reason of numerous adverse factors. These include the abandonment of the Union Pacific "distribution" plan, the Mexican situation, and financial conditions abroad.

Local monetary conditions were easier, this resulting chiefly from diminished demand and the better bank statement.

Bonds were weak for the most part, some speculative issues declining a point. United States 4's declined ½ on call.

CHICAGO MARKET

CHICAGO, Oct. 14.—Wheat prices tumbled today to the lowest point so far on this year's crop.

Bearish cables were what chiefly smashed the market, and left the close nervous ⅞ to 1c down. Corn showed a net loss of ⅝@¾ to ⅞, and oats a drop of 1c to 1⅛. In provisions, the outcome varied from 17½c decline to an advance of 2½.

Bears seized control of wheat right at the start. The Liverpool market had undergone a sharp setback owing to heavy shipments from the Black sea and because of increased selling pressure from Australia. In addition, the crop reports from Argentine continued to be of a flattering character.

Visible supply stocks of wheat, both European and domestic, made big gains, and thus formed an additional weight on prices. The Canadian visible, too, exhibited an increase, although of a less formidable sort. Diminishing of receipts northwest was ignored, as statements were current that rural elevators were filled up, and that any accumulations now would have to be shipped to terminal cities.

Corn suffered from the bearish effects of reported sales of Argentine corn at the seaboard and because of unusual weakness at Buenos Ayres. The fine weather of the last few days tended also to bring out decided activity on the selling side. Kansas dispatches told of pastures in splendid condition with feeding demand likely to be indefinitely postponed. Oats sagged with corn and wheat. A huge enlargement of the visible supply total hindered any effort at a rally.

Weakness in coarse grain as well as in the hog market deprived provision dealers of all idea that important upturns could be forced. Packers unloaded, especially lard.

INCREASED STREET CAR FARES OR POOR SERVICE

Street Railway Companies Unable to Meet Present Day Demands for Such Small Fares

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 14.—Fares will have to be increased if street railway companies must meet the present day demands of the public and survive was the declaration made today by George H. Harries of Louisville, president of the American Electric Railway association, in opening the thirty-second annual convention of that organization and its allied bodies.

Unless fares are increased, he said, there will be a "succession of more or less destructive experiences; now here, now there; resulting, on the one hand, from the broadening of the city borders and the consequent extension of lines; forcible multiplication of transfer points, compulsory wage increases, conscienceless taxation, arbitrary and unreasonable service requirements and growing cost of construction and maintenance, and on the other hand the fixed or rather the diminishing fare."

C. Nesbit Duffy of Milwaukee, one of the arbitrators in the recent dispute between the city of Cleveland and the Cleveland Railway company, in an address declared that low fares in the Ohio city are being maintained only at the sacrifice of service. Mr. Duffy added that the service furnished by the Cleveland company and prescribed by the city officials is inadequate and unsatisfactory, if measured by the standard prevailing in many other cities where the rate of fare is higher.

Must Search for Pearl Fisheries and Treasure Before Getting Legacy

BOSTON, Oct. 14.—A search for treasure in southern waters will shortly be undertaken by Roland P. Kelley, a Harvard junior, in compliance with the terms of the will of his grandfather, T. L. Kelley.

The will provided that young Kelley should have the savings of his grandfather's 50 years of trading as a ship master in the far east on condition that before his twenty-first birthday he should attempt to locate pearl fisheries in an estuary of the Amazon river and two uncharted islands in the Pacific.

These islands, according to the will, were found by the old mariner to contain a large amount of gold and were discovered when he was in search of fresh water on one of his voyages.

Pearls were seen on another voyage. The elder Kelley made several attempts to organize expeditions to the unknown islands but was unsuccessful.

BOETTCHER LIKELY TO BE HEAD OF TRAMWAY

Denver Bankers Think Young Broker Will Be Elected to Succeed Evans

DENVER, Oct. 14.—Claude K. Boettcher, senior member of the bonding house of Boettcher, Porter & Co., one of the most substantial financial institutions of that character in the city, will, in the opinion of leading bankers and business men of the city, be elected president of the Denver City Tramway company to succeed William G. Evans at a meeting of the directors to be held soon.

Mr. Evans resigned the presidency October 1, after heading the Tramway company for many years. Mr. Boettcher is head of a syndicate which began six months ago to gain control of the voting stock of the corporation, and as a result he is said to be slated for the position formerly held by Mr. Evans.

Mr. Boettcher has been spokesman for the new controlling syndicate since the resignation of Mr. Evans, and has outlined its policies to the public in several interviews. He has declared that the Tramway company is not only out of politics for good, but will relinquish its ownership of all real estate in Denver and environs. Also, it has been given out by Mr. Boettcher that the Tramway will dispose of the Denver & Intermountain railroad, which is now operated by the former company between Denver and Golden.

Besides large holdings of Tramway stock Mr. Boettcher is possessor of a large block of the securities of the Denver Union Water company, purchased within the last year. He has shown unusual ability in organizing local magnates for investment in Denver companies, and is regarded in banking circles as one of the most capable young financiers in the city. He is a son of Charles Boettcher, president of the Colorado Portland Cement company and one of the most substantial pioneer business men of Denver.

SHEEP GRAZED ON COLORADO FORESTS BRING TOP PRICES ON KANSAS CITY MARKET

According to a circular just issued by Clay, Robinson & Co., two sheepmen of Glenwood Springs carried off first honors on prices secured for sheep and lambs sold on the Kansas City market last week. The feature of the week was the sale of three carloads of lambs, October 7, for R. Tucker of Glenwood Springs. The lambs averaged 75 pounds in weight and were sold at $7.50, which was ... cents higher than any other lambs sold on that date. J. S. Hunn of Glenwood Springs also topped the market on ewes October 7. Two carloads of these, averaging 100 pounds, were sold at $4.50 per cwt.

All of the sheep sold by Messrs. Hunn and Tucker were grazed during the season on the Holy Cross and White River national forests, which demonstrates the grazing value of national forest ranges.

Three native species of larch furnish timber in the United States. One grows in New England and the lake states, another in the Pacific northwest, and the third in the high mountains of the northern Rockies. European larch has been planted exclusively in the prairie states.

THINGS

You Don't See

When you buy a mattress are its most important features. For instance, there is a stuffing called "linters" which often is made up of left-over wads of cotton seeds and dirt. You can buy one very cheaply. The ticking may be the same as on a high priced mattress, but the humps will come soon and nobody on earth can take them out.

A good mattress, made of layers of white, fluffy cotton, absolutely pure and clean, is worth every penny you pay for it. It will last a lifetime and "come back" fresh and new every time you sun it.

In our mattresses we pride ourselves on cleanliness and big value. A mattress of the right kind is one of the best investments you can make. Come in and get more facts about them. We will fit any bed.

DESIGNS UNIQUE LAMP FOR STRATTON HOME

A handsome study lamp, hand carved, and designed to indicate the source of W. S. Stratton's wealth, has been presented to Dr. D. H. Rice for the Stratton home by [illegible] G. A[illegible], the maker. [illegible] It shows a [illegible] symbolical of a shaft in a mine, and the light is turned on by simply turning the windlass and hoisting a tiny bucket. The lamp is made of oak and is thoroughly practical. It will be placed in the superintendent's home of the Myron Stratton institution.
